Seal to Appeal Tax Decision to Supreme Court

Repeal Move Gains As Ruling Exempts Legal Residents Of Other Areas

Tax Highlights

A United States Court of Appeals decision here yesterday muddled the District taxation situation as follows:

BY HOLDING that a Government employe residing in Washington but "domiciled" . . . elsewhere is not subject to the District personal property levy on intangibles, it threatened to undermine the new District income tax.

THE INCOME TAX, first installment of which is due April 15, apparently no more would apply to non-domiciled residents than would tax on intangibles. Revenues of $1,000,000 had been anticipated from the income tax, which is new to the District this year.

THE DISTRICT GOVERNMENT is planning two steps to evade the full effect of the decision. The first is an appeal to the Supreme Court. The second is to make all protestants prove domicile elsewhere.

A Muddled Issue

Yesterday's decision of the United States Court of Appeals striking at the District's power to tax intangibles of Federal employes, who claim residence elsewhere will be appealed to the Supreme Court, Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal said last night.

Meanwhile, he warned, the appellate court's decision will not halt or delay collections on incomes and returns must be in by April 15, even though they are filed under protest. The decision, Seal contended, does not "blanket in" all other cases and all residents here who fail to file returns will be haled into court.

The decision made itself felt immediately on Capitol Hill, where Chairman Jack Nichols of the House subcommittee on District fiscal affairs called a meeting for Thursday morning to consider a bill drafted by Seal as a substitute for the present law. Nichols said the court decision corroborated his own opinion that the income levy is unworkable in the National Capital.

Income Levy Threat

The threat to the new District income tax is far more significant than the damage to the personal property tax law directly involved in the Sweeney case, according to figures of Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor.

It had been anticipated that the income tax would provide revenue of approximately $1,000,000 a year from individuals as differentiated from corporations.

Early unofficial estimates of the number of Federal employes who might be affected by yesterday's ruling as applied to income tax appeared to be much higher than warranted. Probably not more than 23,000 such employes the estimates showed fall within the income-above - exemption classifications which would be reached by the new District tax. This tax is graduated upward from 1 per cent.

Repeal Moves Boom

Yesterday's ruling said in effect that no matter how long they have been here, no matter how long since they have been home, Federal employes who have "legal residence" elsewhere cannot be made to pay taxes on intangibles in Washington.

An indication that the Seal bill, reviving the Pond formula of a 2 per cent sales tax coupled with a graduated personal income levy beginning at $10,000 would have the support of the majority of the subcommittee, was given when Representative Ambrose Kennedy

Sweeney Tells Of Fight to Win State Rights

JAMES J. SWEENEY

88c in Taxes at Stake In Precedent Case Costing Him Hundreds

The phone rang considerably, late yesterday in the office of James J. Sweeney, room 3618 Justice Department Building, an assistant to the Attorney General, but a resident of the sovereign State of Massachusetts, 467 Tremont street, Boston, by the court's leave.

The callers were congratulating him on his successful contention that Massachusetts is his home, although he lives at 1712 Sixteenth street northwest, Washington, D. C. Others came by to say ritualistically:

"Well, Jim, it look like you did it."

What a Man Should Do

And when they were gone, and between the phone calls, he told The Post that what a man ought to do always is fight in this world and take a problem, look at it squarely, "like this," and his stout Irish arm shot out as toward a knockout wallop, or just in emphasis that a man should look straight down the line to a thing's conclusion.

"So many, even attorneys, had said, 'Oh hell, Jim, you're crazy; go ahead and pay it'." The claim, indeed, hadn't been but 88 cents.

But, said the lawyer, "that would have lost my birthright."

Sweeney, even a very brief conversation would show, is no man to sell his birthright. An hour with Sweeney convinces that he is a fighter and is selling out nothing. Throughout his career he has had opportunities to make big fees in going with private concerns and the like. He'd rather fight where he is, he made clear.

Born on July Fourth

He was born in Boston and "brought up in the old South End, where a person has to fight. You either swam or you sank." His birthday was the Fourth of July, 1891. He had had to make his own way, more or less. He looked straight down the line and made it.

As a successful lawyer in the Justice Department, the question of

Senate Bloc Fails to Shelve Hatch Bill

Vote of 47-36 Comes As Surprise; Filibuster Expected; Brown's Amendment Loses

Hatch Bill Wins Test

By William V. Nessly.
Post Staff Writer

The Senate late yesterday upset calculations and program of its leaders by refusing, 47 to 36, to sidetrack the bitterly-contested Hatch "clean politics" bill and consider the farm appropriations measure.

It was a surprise action, since over the week-end there had been general understanding that the farm bill would be permitted to come up, after which the measure to extend the reciprocal trade program would be disposed of before the Senate resumed consideration of the highly controversially fought Hatch measure.

The Post reported, exclusively, yesterday morning, however, that there were indications the displacement move would meet "formidable" opposition. By the time the Senate voted, the opposition had reached sufficient proportions to turn back the drive.

Filibuster Expected

Last night the Hatch bill, which would extend to District and State employes paid even partially with Federal funds the ban on political activity imposed by the original Hatch act on Government workers, held the floor but apparently faced a filibuster.

The effort by Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, to take up the farm bill was not attributed to opposition to the politics bill, but was ordered by his committee.

However, Hatch act opponents, led by Assistant Majority Leader Minton, of Indiana, have resolutely sought to block the measure. Numerous amendments have for the most part been narrowly defeated.

Shortly before the Senate refused to lay the bill aside it voted down, 53 to 31, an amendment by Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, which would have banned political activities by officers and stockholders having an interest of $25,000 or more in corporations doing business with the Government.

Chances Look Brighter

As the day ended chances for passage of the bill were considered much brighter than during the week-end when it was expected to be laid on the shelf for days or weeks of debate over the farm and trade program legislation.

Proponents of the bill pointed to the loss of their opponents' strength on successive votes involving amendments, and expressed doubt that a filibuster would succeed.

Sarcasm and anger marked the arguments over the legislation yesterday.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, charged opponents of the bill were conducting a filibuster, and derided their allegations that States' rights would be invaded.

He was "moved to tears," he said, by pleas for "the inalienable right

Reich Peace Move Through Pope Seen in Ribbentrop Vatican Visit; Russians in Viipuri, Still Advance

Ryti Believed Carrying Secret Peace Terms Home to Finns

By Witt Hancock,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Tuesday), March 12. Soviet troops yesterday closed a ring around Viipuri by occupying the eastern and northern parts of the city, Leningrad military headquarters reported today.

Russian troops are still advancing in successful actions along the western shore of Viipuri Bay, the regular communique declared.

Nine days ago, the Russians said their troops had entered the southern part of the city and captured the railroad station.

Subsequent communiques did not mention further progress, however.

(Later Finnish communiques said the Russians had not been able to enter any part of the city, though admitting they were hammering at the very gates.)

For several days the Russians have reported their net drawing closer about the city. They claimed advances to the west, east and south of the city, and even to the northeast.

Today was the first time, however, they claimed actually to have encircled the city.

Finns Await Ryti

Helsinki, March 11 (AP).—Finland fought on grimly tonight for her independence while her prime minister, Risto Ryti, was believed here to be homeward bound from Moscow with peace proposals still secret.

The high command acknowledged Russian territorial gains on both ends of the Mannerheim Line across the Karelian Isthmus.

The assertion of British Prime Minister Chamberlain that the British-French Allies are ready to aid was received with great interest but there was no official comment and it was believed the offer would be wrecked by Swedish refusal to permit passage of troops.

It was said officially that the foreign affairs committee of the Diet (Parliament) had not taken any action on Soviet Russian peace proposals.

(There were reports in Stockholm that the Finnish delegation already had left for home by way of Stockholm with the Soviet peace proposals, but as hours passed and the Finns failed to appear there Swedes concluded the talks at the Kremlin were continuing.

(Reuters, a British news agency, reported negotiations were in progress at least as late as this afternoon when the Finns visited Premier

Allies Offer Full Resources Against Soviets If Helsinki Asks

By James B. Reston.

London, March 11.—Great Britain and France, hazarding a sudden and unrestricted war against Soviet Russia, announced today that if they are asked they will "proceed immediately and jointly to help Finland" with "all available resources at their disposal."

While the Finnish delegates in Moscow were trying to negotiate a peace compatible with independence, Prime Minister Chamberlain told a surprised and silent House of Commons that Great Britain not only had refused to act as an intermediary in the Russo-Finnish peace talks but had agreed with France to fight alongside the Finns if Finland asked for help.

Though he did not say when the Allied offer was made, its object was to stiffen Finnish resistance against Russian demands. In this, it evidently was successful for, according to reliable diplomatic dispatches reaching London tonight, the Kremlin already has modified its peace terms.

Secret Maneuvering

Behind the audacious Allied announcement lies three weeks of secret diplomatic maneuvering. On February 22 Ivan M. Maisky, Soviet ambassador, laid before Richard Austin Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, a proposal to end the Finnish war.

The Soviet government, he said, would be prepared to arrange an armistice provided Finland would cede to Russia the whole territory covering Lake Ladoga, including Viipuri, and the whole Karelian Isthmus, all the islands in the Gulf of Finland occupied by Russian troops, the western half of Rybachi Peninsula, which contains the ice-free Arctic port, Petsamo, and a long lease on the Island of Hangoe at the mouth of the Gulf of Finland from where Russian guns could protect the ship channel to Leningrad.

The Soviet ambassador added he had been instructed to request that the British government should act as the intermediary to pass on these terms to Finns.

Commons Divided

For five days the British government studied these terms and then took two decisions. It refused to pass on the proposals to Finland on the ground that the conditions were "outrageous," and after urgent consultations with the French, it offered the Finns the guarantee

Scandinavian Peace Hopes Diminishing

Intensified Russian Offensive Lessens Swedes' Optimism

By Harold Callender.

Stockholm, March 11.—In the highest quarters in this and other Scandinavian capitals there was distinctly less optimism tonight regarding the Finnish-Russian negotiations at Moscow. Betting odds, which yesterday strongly favored an early agreement, fell suddenly today with reports of a stiffening on the part of the Russians.

Few here would venture to guess whether that stiffening would be lessened by Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech today promising Allied help to Finland if such help was requested.

Terms Reported Harsh

It was assumed yesterday that the Finns would not have admitted that their prime minister was in Moscow if they had not thought they had reached the final stage in the negotiations. Some expected the Finnish delegation to land in Stockholm today on an air journey to Helsinki with the draft of a treaty to submit to the Finnish cabinet and Parliament.

But tonight the delegates are still meeting in Moscow. Some said it was because of a snowstorm here, but some attributed it to a haste which might lead to a final result tomorrow, while others thought it an indication of a deadlock and of new obstacles.

"Acted to Help Finland"

Reports of harsher Russian terms—demands for the whole of Lake Ladoga, for Viipuri, even Petsamo—were credited by well-informed observers here.

Earlier high hopes gave rise to discussions of new northern relations which might follow peace. Ivar Oesterstrom, the Liberal leader, alluded vaguely to the possibility that Sweden might give military guarantees to Finland. But there

Crusade Against Communism Indicated as Hitler Envoy Promises Better Conditions For German, Polish Catholics

By Herbert L. Matthews.
Copyright by the New York Times.

Rome, March 11.—The Pope gave the most important audience of his reign this morning when he received Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, and firmly laid down the necessity of "peace with justice" on the basis of the five points he put forward on Christmas.

Von Ribbentrop brought no peace plan but sought the Pope's support for a peace initiative which the Germans are evidently preparing to make, either themselves or through some friendly or neutral power—which may be Italy. There is good authority for believing that the German envoy expressed a willingness on behalf of the Reich to join the world leader in a crusade against bolshevism.

Von Ribbentrop also promised to ameliorate the status of Catholics in Germany, Poland and other occupied territory, and said the Reich would be glad to see August Cardinal Hlond return to Poland.

It seems certain that the primary reason for von Ribbentrop's visit to Rome was to see the Pope. Some quarters believe Premier Mussolini himself urged the meeting and made the arrangements. The Pope himself clearly did not want to see von Ribbentrop and consented only because to refuse would have provoked a grave incident.

The Pope appears to have asked for penance before forgiveness and only if the Reich ceases its persecution of the Catholics can there be any improvement in relations with the Vatican.

Pope Gets First Nazi Greetings

The conversations at the Vatican dwarfed the contact with Italian government. The most important thing to point out in general about von Ribbentrop's visit to the Pope is that it left no optimism at the Vatican, nor is there expected to be any change of attitude on the part of the Pontiff and the Holy See toward the Reich.

Here is a rough summary of the conversation, which has a high probability of being true:

Von Ribbentrop offered his congratulations to the Pope for his election (neither on the occasion of the Pius XI's death nor Pius XII's election had Chancellor Hitler sent an official telegram, nor did he send a delegation to the coronation ceremony). The German envoy then thanked the Pontiff for his work in favor of peace (unlike Britain and France, Germany never before thanked the Pope for his efforts or even mentioned them officially).

Then von Ribbentrop declared Germany was not responsible for the war, and was now only defending herself. This defense may have brought harm to others' interests, but the Reich is willing to make redress. The return of Cardinal Hlond to Poland would be welcomed by Berlin and would confirm the existence of religious liberty, which the government intends to protect.

Ribbentrop Leaves With Glum Look

Von Ribbentrop did not protest the hostile broadcasts of the Vatican radio with regard to Germany, or to other official activities of the Holy See, but he made a point of the fact that these might be utilized by the enemies of Germany and therefore could cause an embitterment of the conflict.

The German minister did not present any peace plan, but is understood to have asked the Pope to put the weight of his moral authority behind eventual initiatives of peace which might be presented by Germany or by an intermediary satisfactory to Germany.

The Pope, in replying to that, is said to have pointed out that as father of all Christians he desires peace and is disposed to give his support to all peace plans, provided that injustices are repaired. The Pope recalled that he had drawn up his idea of a just and honorable peace in the five points of his Christmas address.

Von Ribbentrop is supposed to have taken the line of apologizing for his government, rather than justifying it. However, the Pontiff was strongly insistent on the question of injustices and the necessity of righting them, although he showed no prejudice against a peace accord, as such. In fact, although like the Allies the Pontiff made the reparation of injustices one condition of peace, unlike them he made no claims for eliminating Hitler or the Nazi regime. The Church does not concern itself with forms of government.

Then came the question of the Soviet and communism. Von Ribbentrop is supposed to have said that Nazism saved not only Germany but Catholicism from the Bolshevik peril. The present collaboration with Russia, he continued, is economic and not political or ideological. This collaboration was provoked by Britain, he said, and a peace among the European nations would permit an anti-Bolshevik crusade, from which the Church would benefit.

No one knows yet on what subject this historic audience ended. But everybody who watched the

Film Author Flew In War; Ex-Husband Of Star Fay Wray

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fort Myers, Fla., March 11.—John Monk Saunders, World War pilot, who thrilled thousands of moviegoers with stories of air adventure, took his "last flight" early today. The body of the 42-year-old film writer was found hanging in a closet of his Fort Myers cottage.

The coroner said Saunders, recently divorced by Actress Fay Wray, had died a suicide, and attributed the act to ill health and despondency. The body was fully clothed and a cord from a dressing gown had been used for the noose.

Ill for several months, Saunders had come here for a rest a month ago from Baltimore, where he had been a patient at Johns Hopkins Hospital. A nurse had attended him until last Friday. Two years ago the scenarist of such hits as "Wings" and "A Yank at Oxford" had entered the University of Virginia Hospital suffering from nervousness and insomnia while engaged in historical research at the Charlottesville (Va.) school.

Elected a Rhodes scholar to Oxford after serving as a second lieutenant in the American air force during the war, Saunders later turned to reporting for the Los Angeles Times and the New York Tribune, becoming editor of the American Magazine in 1924.

Saunders and Fay Wray eloped to Easton, Md., June 15, 1928.

Ladies' Lobby Saves Curfew For Child Actors in District

By James D. Secrest

A persistent ladies' lobby of Washington welfare workers and club women yesterday brought about the shelving of a bill to amend the District child labor law to permit juvenile actors to appear on the local stage at night.

Spokesmen for 18 local civic and labor organizations buttonholed members as they came to vote after an hour's debate on the House floor with the result that the measure was recommitted to the House District Committee by a vote of 183 to 134.

Members were besieged with telephone calls, personal calls, and messages prior to the House action as Washington women protested that the committee had reported the measure without holding public hearings. The women twice appealed directly to the committee to recall the bill but without success.

The immediate fate of the legislation, sought by local theatrical and radio interests and indorsed by District officials, was uncertain.

The House passed a half-dozen other uncontroversial local bills after some good-natured political joshing over which party would benefit from a $25,000 authorization to employ extra police for the 1941 Presidential inauguration.

Without objection bills were approved to provide for appeals to the Man, Kidnaped With Wife, Traps Bandit by Car Ruse

A plucky Washington man captured a bandit through a ruse last night after the latter had robbed and kidnaped him and his wife.

Edward T. Farrell, 1213 Fifth street southeast, and his wife, Beulah, had stepped out of a grocery store at Eighth and D streets northeast into their car and driven a block, when the robber arose from behind the seat. The bandit took $2.70 from Mrs. Farrell and ordered her husband to drive toward Baltimore.

With the bandit apparently pointing a gun at his back from a coat pocket, Farrell drove on for several blocks and then remarked that he had very little gas. He was commanded to pull up at the nearest filling station and purchase the required gas, but not to leave his seat.

Farrell drove into the Speedway Service Station, 1800 Bladensburg road northeast and, announcing that he had to unlock the gas tank, quickly stepped out of the car. The thug followed him and ran into Farrell's fist. The attendant, Irvin Schuman, 21, of 1124 Florida avenue northeast, ignoring Farrell's warning that the assailant had a pistol, also pitched in and in a few minutes Schuman and Farrell were sitting atop the robber, who proved to be unarmed.

A special police cruiser several blocks away raced to the scene and CANDID SENATOR: In his heroic ire against census questions, Senator Tobey, who looks as prim and sedate as a New Hampshire meeting house, almost forgot the proprieties in a debate here the other evening.

"Next thing we know," he thundered, "the census men will be asking questions which invade the sacred and inviolable relationships between husband and wife!"

THIRD TERM DIPLOMACY: All of a sudden American diplomats, usually remote from such homespun high-jinks as political campaigns, are a-twitter because one of their own number is doing a sort of Sherlock Holmes abroad, as a sort of roving conscience for Franklin Roosevelt, to help him decide whether he will or won't.

"—Welles' peace pipes belch war clouds"

In a deerstalker hat, incidentally, Sumner Welles would bear a remarkable resemblance to the popular conception of Sherlock.

But it's no topic for levity. Gossip at the State Department has it that on Welles' erect frame hangs the heaviest double burden ever imposed on a diplomat—peace in Europe and a third term in the U. S. A.

* * * *

I have seen a letter written by an eminent diplomat in which he intimates, more baldly than diplomats are prone to intimate, that the President's decision hinges on the tenor of Sumner Welles' report on his pipe-of-peace explorations abroad.

* * * *

The implication is wide open that there are two contingencies which might cause the President to open the throttle toward a third term:

* * * *

1: A chance for Roosevelt to negotiate a peace, a chance so hopeful that he would feel justified in remaining President with a prestige undiminished by imminent retirement from office.

* * * *

2: An implacable determination by the belligerents to wage an increasingly ruthless war which might threaten to involve the U. S.

* * * *

Just what the European contingencies are which might prompt Mr. Roosevelt to feel justified in renouncing a third term does not seem clear, from this analysis, as the two possibilities mentioned almost blanket the field.

"—each peace dove a target"

So far every dove of peace that Mr. Welles has presumably released, hopefully, since he landed in Europe has promptly become a target—often before he took it out of his briefcase. Welles is finding peace no pipe.

Farley Plans 'Biggest' Book At Convention

Scoffs at Hamilton Suggestion Party Abandon 'Souvenir'

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

Chairman Farley of the Democratic National Committee last night turned thumbs down on Republican pleas for abandonment of convention handbooks and announced plans for a Democratic "souvenir" book with a "biggest yet" circulation.

Disregarding what he termed Republican Chairman John Hamilton's "unsolicited advice," Farley slapped at Republican collections from "a selected list of very rich men" and declared Hamilton naturally "would like to see the Democratic sources of supply curtailed."

Farley announced, "There will be the usual (Democratic) convention souvenir book this year, packed with Democratic arguments, and a recital of the accomplishments of the Roosevelt Administration, and it is hoped that it will have a circulation that will appeal to advertisers."

Says Nation Was Shocked

Hamilton had announced the G. O. P. would publish no handbook for its Philadelphia convention and had called for abandonment of this lucrative source of campaign receipts by both parties. The Republican chairman charged this device was "so shamelessly used" by the Democrats in 1936 to obtain funds by sale of books and advertising to corporations "that it shocked the morality of the Nation."

Farley tartly denied that Democrats netted nearly a million dollars from the books four years ago, placing net party profits instead at $175,000. He said the Democratic Party had issued such a book since 1856 and this year, as usual, "purposes carrying out its own program."

"The majority party will pay as much attention to this advice (Hamilton's) as would Mr. Hamilton if we urged that in the interest of honest Government he abstain from taking anything from the Weirs, the Pews, the duPonts, and the others who are taking care of the G. O. P.'s financial affairs," said the Democratic National Committee statement.

Ads Strictly Business

"According to the published accounts, the duPonts and officials of their companies contributed $383,000 to the Republican war chests in 1936. Mr. Joe Pew chiped in $61,500. In vie wof the Repubican chairman's sudden revlusion against processes he deems unethical, I suppose we may expect any day now an announcement that he will henceforth sternly refuse such contributions."

Farley declared businssmen advertised because of the opportunity to get their wares before the most people, and "this is true whether the advertising is in a newspaper, on a billboard or over the radio." He said businessmen were buying circulation and not concerned particularly "because of their political affiliations or prejudices."

Both Democratic and Republican National Committees, meanwhile, reported they were out of the red and had cash balances in their war chests.

Oliver A. Quayle, treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, informed the clerk of the House that Democrats collected $412,481 in the first two months of this year, while C. B. Goodspeed, Republican National Committee treasurer, placed Republican receipts at $506,100 in the same period.

At the start of this month, Republicans had a cash balance on hand of $165,909, Goodspeed said, while Quayle reported a $66,670 Democratic cash balance.

$300,000 From Dinners

As campaign cash registers tinkled, the Democratic committee said $300,000, the bulk of its reecipts, came from the recent Jackson Day dinners. Only one private individual contribution as large as $1,000 was reported—from Wayne F. Palmer, of Mobile, Ala. The $100-a-plate Jackson Day dinner in Washington netted the highest receipts from the rallies—$50,000.

Including in the Republican collections was $160,000, first payment on Philadelphia's pledge of $200,000 for the Republican convention. Individual Republican donations ranged up to $4,000, and more than 200 individual party members were listed as contributing $1,000 or more. The committee turned $5,000 of its receipts over to the Republican Congressional campaign committee, which reported disbursing $2,500 in Ohio's Seventeenth District and $2,000 in Ohio's Twenty-second District, where Republicans recently won two special elections.

New Hampshire voters will go to the polls today in the first of the Nation's Presidential primaries. In the absence of Mr. Roosevelt's withdrawal they will chose a majority of their Democratic convention delegates from a third-term draft slate.

Pledges Analyzed

A full slate of Roosevelt delegates filed by Robert C. Murchie, Democratic State chairman, was certain of capturing at least five of the Democratic convention places because of lack of opposition, and appeared likely to win several more.

Of 16 candidates seeking the eight Democratic delegates-at-large seats, 11 were pledged to President Roosevelt, 2 to Postmaster General Farley, 1 to Vice President Garner, and 2 were unpledged. Robert H. Sanderson, treasurer of the New Hampshire Democratic State Committee, was leading the fight on the draft Roosevelt movement in campaigning for election as unpledged delegate. "Keep alive the third term tradition," was Sanderson's slogan.

Republican candidates for delegates generally were running as unpledged, though tacitly for Senator Bridges, as Republican favorite son. Eight Republicans were seeking for delegate-at-large seats, with Senator Bridges, Senator Tobey and Gov. Murphy apparently due to win three of these. Bucking the G. O. P. State organization, J. Howard Gile, former Nashua police commissioner, carried the colors of Thomas E. Dewey, Gile is running on a Dewey pledge despite Dewey's request that his name not be entered in New Hampshire.

Long Silence Expected

Failure of the President to discourage the draft movement in New Hampshire and in some 9 of the 15 Presidential primary States in which third-term advocates are active, led many observers to conclude Mr. Roosevelt would not break his third-term silence before the eve of the Democratic convention.

Today's New Hampshire primaries will be followed in three weeks by the first out-and-out test between Roosevelt and Garner slates in Wisconsin, and other similar contests closely following a week later in Illinois and Nebraska. The first Republican showdown between Dewey and Vandenberg slates will also be provided in Wisconsin's April 2 primaries.

Other developments:

Friends of Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, announced he would call at the White House in the next few days to state his reasons for not running for reelection to the Senate. Donahey subsequently is expected to issue a statement denying that his decision not to run implied a belief that 1940 would be a Republican year in Ohio.

California Rift

Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, was reported near a break with Gov. Olson of California on the third-term issue. While Senator Downey has made no formal statement on his third-term views, he was reported unwilling to serve on a Roosevelt delegate slate being prepared by Gov. Olson. Secretary of Interior Ickes was on his way to California last night, reputedly in an effort to insure filing of only one Roosevelt slate of delegates in the California primaries.

A "favorite son" slate pledged to the President in Ohio remained unopposed last night after National Committeeman Charles Sawyer, nominally runnning for the favorite son spot, reported settlement of a factional dispute over delegates. Garner forces recently indicated they would not enter Ohio, and Postmaster General Farley was reported unlikely to.

Joseph C. Marr Dies Here at 67

Joseph C. Marr, 67, former employe of the Pennsylvania Railroad for 20 years, died yesterday at his home, 2600 Thirty-third street southeast.

A native of Charles County, Md., Mr. Marr was active here in the Macabees Society. He leaves a son, Thomas D. Marr, and a daughter, Mrs. Estelle Shaffer, both of this city.

Funeral services will be at 9 a. m. Thursday at Murray's funeral home, 2007 Nichols avenue southeast. Requiem mass will follow in St. Francis Xavier Church. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

On Capitol Hill

By the Associated Press

The House by unanimous consent yesterday settled a Congressional election contest in the Ninth Iowa District.

HARRINGTON

It adopted a report of a House Elections Committee holding Albert F. Swanson, Sioux City Republican, had failed to show grounds for a recount and recommending that Vincent F. Harrington (Democrat) continue as Representative of the district in the Seventy-sixth Congress.

That brown leather case Speaker Bankhead carries to the Capitol every day is not filled with important state papers—it's his lunch.

Although he is a "favorite son" candidate for the Presidency and already holds one of the Nation's most powerful political offices, the Speaker, like many an American workingman, always carries his lunch to work. It is packed for him by Mrs. Bankhead.

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, wrote Attorney General Jackson yesterday that the Federal Bureau of Investigation needed "a strong, restraining hand to keep it within bounds."

Asking Jackson to make a further "impartial" investigation of the FBI's handling of men and women arrested in Detroit for recruiting soldiers for the Spanish "loyalists," Norris charged that they were "subjected to third-degree methods."

President Roosevelt submittted to the Senate the nominations of Cols. Charles D. Hartman, Clifford L. Corbin and Joseph E. Barzynski to be assistant's to the Army's quartermaster general.

Corbin is a native of Ohio; Barzynski, of Nebraska, and Hartman, of Mississippi.

Mr. Roosevelt also nominated Brig. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming, of the Louisiana National Guard, to hold the same rank in the United States National Guard.

Congress was asked to determine whether "a lot of high-toned bureaucrats" are enjoying vacations in Florida at the expense of taxpayers.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, introduced a resolution which would require Government departments and agencies to file with Congress not later than April 1 a statement giving the name and expenses of each employe who has been to Florida at Government expense since November 15, 1939.

"My information," Taber told the House, "is that we will find a lot of high-toned bureaucrats enjoying a vacation at Government expense."

Wagner Offers Bill Regulating Stock Trusts

Will Introduce Plan Today to Restrict Investment Groups

By Felix Cotten.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, plans to introduce today a bill drawn by the Securities and Exchange Commission for regulation of the Nation's 650 investment trusts and companies, whose assets total about $4,000,000,000.

The bill is the culmination of an investigation by the SEC lasting four years. The inquiry was ordered by Congress in the 1935 public utility holding company act.

Presumably, an identical bill will be introduced in the House by Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, chairman of the House interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

Wagner Seeks Action Now

Wagner said he would try immediately to get action on the bill. Lea explained, however, that "it is rather unlikely that Congress will act on the bill at this session."

"About the only advantage in introducing the legislation at this time," he declared, "would be to obtain from the industry affected constructive suggestions which may be useful in working out the legislation at the next session."

The bill, it was learned, will require investment trusts to register with the SEC as a lever provision under which the commission will supervise these concerns.

Forbids "Self-Dealing"

The bill, it is said, will prohibit "self-dealing" and other "conflicts of interest" in the operation of investment companies. Mergers can be carried out only under conditions laid down by the SEC. Officers and directors will be prohibited from selling securities to their companies, and the latter will be barred from making loans to their officers and directors.

The bill will provide, it is said, for registration of officers and directors of investment companies similar to the registration of brokers and dealers required by the 1934 Securities and Exchange Act.

Bars Shift in Status

Investment companies registered as such will be required to maintain that status and not become holding companies.

Another object of the legislation, it is said, is to require full disclosure by the companies of their financial condition. In order to do this the bill will empower the SEC to require the companies to follow uniform accounting principles.

Provision will be made, it was learned, for protection of investors who purchase investment trust shares on the installment plan.

Roosevelt Sees New Tax Need In Farm Parity

No Decision Reached In 'General' Talk, Barkley Says

By the United Press

New tax legislation became a distinct threat yesterday when President Roosevelt suggested to Congressional leaders that additional revenue may have to be raised to offset farm parity price subsidies.

Senate Democratic leader Barkley revealed that Mr. Roosevelt brought the subject up at his regular legislative conference, in connection with the Senate Appropriation Committee's addition of $212,000,000 for parity payments to the 1941 agriculture appropriation bill.

The discussion was general, Barkley said, and no decision was made.

A conference of House Republicans meantime unanimously adopted a report prepared by a 13-man committee headed by Representative Wadsworth, of New York, opposing Mr. Roosevelt's budget request for $460,000,000 of special defense taxes.

House Republican Leader Martin, of Massachusetts, said there was "no opposition" but that Representative Fish, of New York, opposed certain phases of the naval expansion bill, which comes up in the chamber today.

The report expressed "concern" over the fact that "should we be drawn into a war of the first magnitude we should have to start with a debt of at least $44,000,000,000, probably more, and then finance the effort on top of that debt.

"We are convinced that such a tax would be inadequate as a remedy and essentially unsound. It would not reach the heart of the problem."

The report maintained that both the Army and Navy should be stronger if "our military defense is to be adequate," but it emphasized the importance of not impairing "the security of our free institutions."

The threat of new taxes was raised while efforts to bring the farm bill before the Senate were stymied by refusal of the legislators to sidetrack consideration of amendments to the Hatch "Clean Politics" Act.

As passed by the House the farm bill called for appropriation of $713,896,084, or $57,000,000 less than budgeted. But the Senate committee added the parity fund, plus $85,000,000 to expand the food stamp plan for distribution of surplus commodities. These, with other changes, brought the bill to a total of $922,864,668.

The increases, if approved, would wipe out almost all of the savings effected thus far by economy forces in their drive to obviate the need of raising $460,000,000 in national defense taxes, as requested by Mr. Roosevelt, or raising the $45,000,000,000 national debt limit. Presumably, the increased farm funds would carry the national debt above this limit if offset taxes are not imposed.

Pedestrians Get 2-Day Preview Of New Underpass

Washingtonians—but only those afoot—will be given a preview of the Thomas Circle underpass and surface traffic improvements today and tomorrow, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, announced yesterday.

From 2 to 5 p. m. each day, officials will be on hand to conduct inspection tours for pedestrians, Capt. Whitehurst said. The white-tiled tunnel for Massachusetts avenue will be opened for vehicular traffic Thursday.

It was explained the preview was arranged because when traffic begins to shoot beneath the circle, the underpass will be too dangerous for pedestrians.

Court Opens Secret Records Of Long Aides

Louisiana Citizens Given Right to See Conservation Books

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, March 11.—The Louisiana Supreme Court today joined voters and legislators in rebuffing Gov. Earl K. Long's efforts to retain some of the power enjoyed by the political machine set up by the late Huey P. Long.

The high court, reversing itself from the familiar old 4-3 decisions given the administration, voted unanimously to throw open to public gaze the long closed and closely guarded records of the State conservation department, which opposition candidates during the recent gubernatorial primaries claimed contained many damning secrets involving machine leaders.

The action was taken in sustaining an appeal court ruling that two representatives of the Citizens' Voluntary Committee, which for months has been fighting to see the records, be given that right two weeks hence.

Were Closed "for Audit"

The books contain records of administration of State oil and mineral laws, which have been questioned in some phases by the Federal Government. They were ordered closed "for audit" by Gov. Long shortly after he took office eight months ago. Long put in a new conservation commissioner. State Senator-elect Ernest L. Clements, whose predecessor as commissioner, William G. Rankin, is in Federal prison at Atlanta.

A Department of Interior report, made public here last month by Assistant Attorney General Rogge, charged Rankin and his predecessor, Robert S. Maestri, now Mayor of New Orleans, had permitted illegal excesses of oil to be produced in one field and that Maestri thereby derived "large profits" through his interest in the company.

Mayor Maestri was Long's chief supporter in his recent unsuccessful campaign against Sam H. Jones for the governorship.

Ballot Appeal Shelved

The court today further rebuffed the defeated Governor in his legal fight to get into the Jones administration as secretary of state. After accepting Long's brief supporting his claim for an injunction halting printing of ballots for the April 16 general election unless these carried his name for secretary of state, the court took the case under advisement. Printers were authorized to proceed with printing ballots carrying the name of James A. Gremillion, who was backed by Jones.

The Democratic State central committee two weeks ago named Long for the post to succeed E. A. Conway, incumbent nominee who died in office. A week later the committee rescinded its action and named Gremillion, who also was named by the newly constituted State central committee. Long thereafter went to court.

2,000 See Benefit Preview Of the Easter Style Parade

Beautiful ladies in beautiful gowns paced the long white ramp in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom yesterday in a preview of Washington's Easter parade planned to bring Easter gladness to sufferers at Children's Hospital.

Nearly 2,000 women and a bold few of their husbands and male friends saw the three performances of the Connecticut Avenue Association fashion show yesterday afternoon and evening. The proceeds will go to the blood and serum bank campaign sponsored by The Washington Post and Station WJSV.

Evening gowns and afternoon frocks, street ensembles and party dresses were displayed in the hour-long show, and even matronly negligees and corsets appeared, to the embarrassment of male onlookers.

Marshall Adams, The Post's fashion editor, described the finer points of color, fabric and design as the dainty models walked and circled with stately strides. The mid-afternoon show was broadcast by Station WJSV.

Modeling dresses, hats and shoes provided by a score of shops were Rita Ferguson, Margaret Anderson, Peggy Flournoy, Pat Peake, Ann King, Mary Selden Kennedy, Margaret Grover, Ada Hickey and Dorothy Flaherty. Appearing in his own well-groomed coat, but a hit with the audience, was Pat Peake's collie, Duke.

Shops who showed their proudest creations were the Charlotte Parker, Phillip-Louise, Forrest Oakley, Bernard's Furs, Schwab, Embassy Gowns, Jean Matou, Alice Fay, the Kalmia Shop, Mme. Agasta, Pasternak, Melgra and Julia Bird.

Shoes were by Art Craft Footwear, the Bootery and Slatonian; hats by the Shop Individual and Floselle; and coiffure by Robert of Paris and Emile.

Between groups of styles the Emile Health Club demonstrated by beauty exercises how the models keep their lovely figures, and dances were given by the Jack Rollins, Arthur Murray, and Thayer Studios.

Gannett Predicts 600 Uninstructed At Convention

New York, March 11 (AP).—Frank Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., publisher and candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, predicted here tonight that uninstructed delegates to the party's national convention would number as high as 600, and said he believed a "very wholesome situation" would be the result.

Such a large group of unpledged delegates, he declared in an interview, would make it "more difficult to make deals" in the convention and would provide opportunity to "pick the best man for the job—the man who can make the best fight against the New Deal and the man who can lick Roosevelt."

Gannett said he assumed Mr. Roosevelt would run again, as the man best fitted to defend the New Deal, adding that it seemed doubtful such a "conservative" as Secretary of State Hull could be nominated.

Finns Appeal For Bicycles To Replace Skiis

An appeal for bicycles to replace Finnish defenders' skiis during spring and summer was issued yesterday by Risto Solanko, secretary of the Finnish Legation here.

"The Finns have to be able to move quickly in order to rush help to victims of aerial bombardment and to extinguish fires started by air raiders," said Solanko. He added that bicycles seem to be the most practical way to transport refugees.

Spy Leader Reported Held For Dies Action

Russian Arrested In Plot to Smuggle Aliens, Paper Says

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., March 11.—The Herald said tonight an important Russian spy had been arrested near Washington and Chairman Martin Dies would bring him before the Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities, probably Friday.

Dies is at Miami Beach, where today he was informed by American Legion officials that 80,000 aliens had gathered in Cuba with the intention of finding a way into the United States.

The newspaper said it had learned authoritatively that the Russian, assertedly one of the heads of the Soviet spy ring in this country, had gained entry through Miami by way of Cuba and had been instrumental in getting other members of the Russian secret police past immigration authorities.

The prisoner was said to have made a full report of his American activities.

Dies declined to comment on the Herald's statements.

James Barney, commander, and H. Frost Bailey, chairman of the resolutions and immigration committee of the Harvey Seeds Post, American Legion, informed the chairman of the alleged concentration of aliens in Cuba.

"I want to know where the leak is in our frontier," Dies commented. "They must have some good reason to think they can get in, for the quota has been taken up for 10 years."

The committee chairman plans to return to Washington tomorrow night.

S. B. Child Named By WPA to Head Historical Survey

Appointment of Sargent B. Child as director of the WPA Historical Records Survey was announced last night by Mrs. Florence Kerr, assistant commissioner. Elefen outstanding historians and archivists have agreed to assist as a national advisory committee.

CHILD

A native of Vermont, a graduate of Amherst and Columbia universities, Child also studied at New York University, University of Berlin, and Smithsonian Institution. He participated in an expedition which discovered the source of the Orinoco River.

Child came to Washington in 1934, served in the Press Intelligence Service and Federal Housing Administration, and has been with the WPA since its inception.

The Federal Diary

Rea Named to Key Wage Hour Position

Courts Davidson Rea, son of the late Kennedy F. Rea, who was clerk of the Senate Appropriations Committee for many years, has been assigned the key post of senior administrative assistant in the Wage-Hour Division, it was learned yesterday.

Rea's appointment was seen as a move toward smoothing relations between the division and its parent Labor Department. A veteran in organizing and classifying personnel in New Deal agencies, Rea will adjust differences on personnel matters between the department and its grown-up "baby" division.

Col. Philip B. Fleming, administrator, announced that his assistant, Baird Snyder, will be acting administrator when Fleming is away. Rea's official assignment will be that of assistant to Snyder.

Rea became chief of classification for the Resettlement Administration in 1935, and directed the job of classifying about 50,000 positions. He helped organize the Bureau of Old-Age Benefits for the Social Security Board, and spent two years as senior classification examiner for Interior. Earlier he was in the State and Commerce departments for several years.

He came into the wage-hour work with Col. Fleming, after the first administrator, Elmer Andrews, left the post November 7, and has been directing the division's organization surveys.

Names, it develops, should make numbers, Civil Service officials are thinking.

For years, the commission has been bothered at intervals by the Government employes who have identical names. Sometimes the wrong person with the right name has been fired. This happened at the Veterans' Administration and remained undiscovered for seven years.

At the end of this period it was found that the woman who had been discharged had another job, the one who had retained the other's rightful job had made good, and everyone was happy.

Everyone was happy except the commission, which thought such mixups might not always turn out for the good. There have been other times when the wrong man has been certified and appointed to a job, and after that is done, the Attorney General has ruled it can't be undone.

Now, statistics experts have dug into the problem and counted all the names beginning with R on the civil service rolls. What they found should make a lot of Government employes change their names to something unmistakable like Darlington Chovnovgorod or Etaion Shrdlu-Smythe.

Out of the list they found 2,712 persons with "name twins;" 1,002 who were triplets. One name, John J. Ryan, appeared 17 times.

An identification number for each employe on the rolls is seen as the eventual answer, and just to prove that to be a sound idea, and necessary, they're going to count the Smiths.

Calendar: Importance of long-range forecasting of budget needs and requirements for materials and men on Government projects will be described at a meeting of the Society for the Advancement of Management at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow in Barker Hall, Seventeenth and K streets northwest. Fisher, chief of retirement for the Civil Service Commission, will outline the plan for voluntary contributions to the retirement fund at a meeting of AFGE's Commerce Lodge at 8 p. m. today.

Germany Hails Gain in Prestige from Series of Diplomatic Successes

Russo-Finn Peace Is Seen, Easing Strain

Anglo-French Moves To Get Scandinavia Into War Held Balked

By Guido Enderis.
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, March 11. — Diplomatic shifts over the week-end are believed in German quarters to have confronted the western powers with momentous decisions destined to have a powerful influence on the conflict.

Germany's diplomatic position is considered to have gained prestige for several reasons. The chief one is based on the assumption that the end of the Russo-Finnish conflict is in sight. Impending termination is accepted here as marking also the end of Anglo-French maneuvers in Scandinavia and all further attempts to carry the war into northern Europe.

Finn Liquidation Assumed

Neutral quarters are still awaiting the definitive outcome of the Russo-Finnish negotiations in Moscow, but the inescapable implications are already taken at face value and it is commonly accepted that the "Finnish question" is approaching its inevitable liquidation.

Its abrupt conclusion is believed in certain diplomatic circles to be due to no small measure to diplomatic pressure exerted on the Soviets by the Germans. While authenticated details of the scope of this intervention are not yet established, informed quarters are convinced that the Germans not only encouraged the original Swedish initiative, but undertook a bold demarche in Moscow.

Quiet on Visit to Rome

It is in this connection that neutral diplomatic circles in Berlin are inclined to give German diplomacy credit for what is accepted as a decisive defeat of British attempts to embroil the Scandinavian states.

The press refrains from unduly exploiting Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop's visit to Rome, although the circumstances that he was closeted with the Pope and later had a lengthy consultation with Luigi Cardinal Maglione, the papal secretary of state, also was counted as a significant enhancement of the Reich's diplomatic prestige.

The press points out that Von Ribbentrop's visit to the Vatican cannot fail to "have fruitful results." An inspired communique states that today's contacts with the Vatican were on a purely "informatory" character designed to elucidate the German war and peace aims, and the German determination to such a decisive victory over the western powers as "will insure lasting peace in Europe and establish the foundation for a new order based on equality and justice."

Information as to the contents of the conversations Von Ribbentrop had with Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Count Ciano were equally negative in character. Whatever the trio of statesmen discussed, it was stated, "obviously concerned the mutual interests of the axis partner as they may have been affected by current events and the two-day visit could not fail to give renewed expression of the important functions revolving upon the axis in the political development of Europe."

Army to Fight Dublin's Fires

Dublin, March 11.—The army took over Dublin's fire service today.

The first direct government intervention was made by Premier De Valera when firemen on strike refused to return to duty. Tonight the strike committee, representing some 2,000, will consider the situation, and fears of a general strike in Ireland's capital are entertained.

are no visible signs in official quarters that Scandinavian solidarity will soon reach such a point, although it is agreed that this solidarity has little meaning without a common defensive policy.

In an interview with this correspondent tonight Christian E. Guenther, the foreign minister, defended the Swedish government's course in forwarding the Russian peace proposals to Finland and replied to the expressed and implied criticism of that course abroad.

Chamberlain told the House of Commons today the British government had refused to forward a Russian peace proposal to Finland on the ground that those proposals were not honorable for the Finns, and that the terms were then proposed to and forwarded by the Swedes.

The British point, commented the Swedish foreign minister, "appeared to be that the British government did not recommend the terms to the Finns. Neither did we. We simply transmitted them. I don't see how we could have helped Finland by withholding even bad terms.

"It has been said we entered pressure to induce the Finns to accept adverse terms. The truth is we carefully refrained from exerting pressure. We transmitted proposals from one side to the other. We acted to help Finland. We have had not the least contact with Germany in this affair from beginning to the end.

"Yet it is said abroad we acted on orders from Berlin. I know nothing of Germany's interests in this question, but it is in the interests of Finland as of all the northern countries to end the war in an acceptable manner."

The foreign minister was asked about the possibility of a Swedish guarantee to Finland as a sequel to the peace.

Race With the Weather

By the Associated Press

Stockholm (Tuesday), March 12.—Informed Scandinavians said dragging Finnish-Russian peace negotiations were at a critical stage today as hour after hour passed without word of a decision that will determine the issue of peace in Finland or continued war with its threatening implications for the rest of northern Europe.

Russians in Viipuri, Still Advancing

No Peace at Helsinki

Certainly there was no peace in the air here at Helsinki.

Residents scurried to bomb shelters five times during the day. Russian planes were sighted on the outskirts of the city, but no bombs were dropped in the capital area.

Telephone communication to the outside world was extremely restricted, however, and it was believed extensive bombing had occurred in southern Finland.

An official communique reported widespread Russian air raids today outside the war zone, with at least two civilians killed.

Among the places bombed were Kouvala, Kausala in the Kymijoki Valley, several villages south of Lahti and some villages east of Riihimaki. In western Finland Karjala, Koski and Lohja were bombed, and a church was damaged at Taivalkoski.

Russians Lose 1,000

The hard-pressed Finns gained some comfort after a disagreeable day from an army communique which said the Russians had been repulsed in many sectors and at Kollaan River, north of Lake Ladoga, had lost 1,000 men.

Russian gains at both ends of the Mannerheim Line were regarded as minor successes by the Finns.

Russian troops were active along almost all Finnish fronts.

At Kollaan River, where the Finns declared they had killed more than 3,000 Russian soldiers in the past four days, an all-day battle raged. Six tanks were reported destroyed in the Karelian Isthmus fighting Sunday.

The Finns acknowledged Russian troops had made slight gains on the mainland off the Bay of Viipuri and had captured an island in the Pitkaranta Archipelago in Lake Ladoga.

Finns Skeptical of Peace

Russian attacks were said to have been repulsed still farther north near Kuhmo and Salla.

Today in Helsinki one continued to get the feeling that the average Finn is fanatical in his desire to maintain the integrity of the republic the hardy people have built for themselves.

The Helsinki newspaper Svenska Pressen declared:

"The (peace) negotiations are not exciting us. The fact that hostilities are not interrupted while they are going on tells us much about the character of the negotiations."

Death Verdict Is Reversed By High Court

Conviction Set Aside As Obtained Through The Third Degree

By the United Press

The Supreme Court yesterday reiterated its disapproval of use of forced confessions as a basis for convictions and set aside a death sentence ordered for Dave Canty, colored, of Montgomery, Ala.

Canty, whose conviction was sustained by the Alabama Supreme Court, alleged in his appeal that the confession on which his prosecution was largely based, was extracted by third-degree methods.

The Supreme Court did not hand down a formal opinion, merely noting that it was reversing the conviction on the basis of its decision last month in a case involving four Florida colored men. In that case, Justice Hugo L. Black, speaking for a unanimous court, excoriated use of the third degree and reaffirmed the tribunal's position as a "refuge for the poor, the weak and the oppressed."

The court also denied the petition of William P. Buckner and William J. Gillespie for a review of their conviction on mail fraud charges in connection with an alleged scheme to defraud holders of Philippine Railway Co. bonds.

Buckner was sentenced to two years' imprisonment and fined $2,500, and Gillespie to 18 months and fined $2,500 following a sensational trial in which the Government called witnesses who told of night club parties and airplane trips from New York to Washington for show girls.

Buckner and Gillespie contended, in seeking a high court review that "endless inquiries into the quantity and quality of the types of food and drink consumed" and "the fact that one of the young ladies ordered a steak instead of an ordinary sandwich" were entirely irrelevant to the question whether their conduct was illegal, and that their trial should be set aside.

Allies Offer Full Resources to Aid Finland

which Chamberlain announced today.

Many working class people and possibility of war with Russia is taken lightly here, despite the poor showing of the Russian troops in the early days of the Russian war. It is true a few military strategists such as Leslie Hore-Belisha have been urging this course in the newspapers, but arguments in favor of it still are not clear to the average man.

Many workingclass people and members of the Labor Party, while they have no respect for Josef Stalin, still think he is the head of the "peoples' government."

Many others do not see the logic of taking on another enemy "before you have licked the first." And as soon as the premier made his announcement in the Commons one could see that the members were not unanimous.

Silent on Norse Neutrality

The prime minister answered questions cautiously. The Allies would, he said, take their action to help Finland under the Covenant of the League. As to going to war against Russia, "we have not arrived at that yet," he said, and it is believed significant he refused to answer a question about whether the Allies were prepared to respect Norway's neutrality.

Though for weeks it has been known that the Norwegians and Swedes, fearing cooperation with the Allies would invite a German attack, had obstructed almost all attempts to increase aid to the Finns, it was not until the last few days that British officials mentioned these differences openly.

Today, however, there was no attempt to conceal the official feeling that both Scandinavian countries have adopted a policy which has benefited Germany and Russia and hampered the Finns.

To Cut Off Swedish Ore

The Allies offered this guarantee for four reasons:

They want to keep Russia entangled so she will not be able to send raw materials to Germany.

They want to keep the Russians and the Germans from dominating the Scandinavian peninsular because they know Germany might then establish air and naval bases in Norway against Britain's navy.

They want to extend the war into the north in order to cut off Germany from 10,000,000 tons of iron ore she now is getting yearly from Sweden.

They want to help the Finns because they know it is illogical to fight Germany for aggressing against Poland and to allow Russia to go scot free, when the Soviet overruns Finland.

But wanting to help the Finns and actually helping them are two different things. The Allies wanted to go to the aid of Poland but they could not do it and the Finns, undoubtedly, are remembering that at the Kremlin tonight.

Three Ways to Help

Military authorities here point out three ways in which the Allies conceivably can go to the help of the Finns. They can send an expeditionary force to Petsamo and Murmansk, they can land their troops at the Norwegian port of Narvik and transport them across the one single line of railway to Finland from there, or they can muster their Middle-east forces for an attack against the Baku oilfields and south Russia.

All three of these campaigns would bring up most difficult strategic and diplomatic problems. Russian troops occupy Murmansk and and Petsamo, where the Allied forces would have to fight their way ashore.

Norway and Sweden both have made it clear they do not want Allied troops marching through their countries en route to Finland, and the allied Near East reserves are still more a defensive than an offensive force.

Ribbentrop Sees Pope at Vatican

When he took the 9:30 train tonight for Berlin, he left virtually empty-handed.

Von Ribbentrop evidently had so much to say that he could not get it all off his chest in the hour and five minutes he spent alone with the Pontiff, although that was an unprecedented length for an audience. This was shown by the fact that, contrary to custom, he stayed with Luigi Cardinal Maglione, papel secretary of state, immediately afterinstead of the usual formal courtesy call. Moreover, Cardinal Maglione after he left went straight up to the Pope's apartment to report.

This afternoon he had conversations with Foreign Minister Count Ciano and Mussolini, lasting an hour and 25 minutes. It is certain Von Ribbentrop gave a full account of his conversations at the Vatican, but beyond that Italian official circles are highly discreet—perhaps because there is nothing to say.

One may suppose that the axis has been strengthened somewhat by Von Ribbentrop's visit, but beyond that it would be hazardous to go.

Finn Bonds Gain On Allied Pledge

New York, March 11 (AP).—The dollar bonds of Finland jumped more than $50 per $1,000 par value bond today as Wall Street's traders read that Prime Minister Chamberlain said the Allies were prepared to aid the embattled country.

The quotation on Finland 6s rose to $550, from $495. Finland Residential Mortgage Bank stamped 6s skyrocketed $135, to $450.

5 Feet 6, Man Wins Benefits For Injuries Sensitivity Caused

Court Rules He Has Claim to Worker's Compensation

Human nature is an occupational hazard, the United States Court of Appeals held, in effect, yesterday in ruling a man injured in resenting a jocular epithet based on his stature was entitled to workmen's compensation.

The opinion, written by Associate Justice Wiley Rutledge, upheld a District Court order sanctioning a compensation award to Ray Bridges, 29, of 2335 Third street northeast, helper at a grocery warehouse. Bridges, who is 5 feet 6, sought compensation for injuries allegedly received when he resentd being called "Shorty" by a fellow workman.

"Men," said the opinion, "do not discard their personal qualities when they go to work. Into the job they carry their intelligence, skill, habits of care and rectitude. Just as inevitably they take along also their tendencies to carelessness and camaraderie, as well as emotional make-up. In bringing them together, work brings these qualities together, causes friction between them, creates occasions for lapses into carelessness, and the fun-making and emotional flareup."

House Military Committee to Probe Sale of Fastest U. S. War Planes to Allies

Harter Fears Giving Army Secrets Away

Officials Hint Better Ships Are Planned Than 400-M.P.H. Pursuits

By John G. Norris,
Post Staff Writer

A congressional investigation into foreign purchases of latest American warplanes was ordered yesterday as protests echoed on Capitol Hill to the release of the Army's new 400-mile-an-hour pursuit plane for sale to Great Britain and France.

Representative Harter (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman of the aviation subcommittee of the House Military Affairs Committee, announced his subcommittee would investigate the release of the Curtiss P-40 plane to foreign buyers, after expressing a fear the Army was "giving its secrets away."

"I was surprised and disturbed at reading in The Post this morning that the Army had released the P-40 for foreign sale," Harter declared. "This is our latest pursuit plane and none has been delivered to the Army.

Other Planes Sought

"It seems to me not only poor defense policy but unfair to the taxpayers of this country. The Government has paid a large part of the cost of developing this plane and gearing the plant for mass production. Now it will be sold abroad, presumably at mass production prices."

Harter said "rumors had reached him" that efforts are being made to secure release of other of the Army's latest warplanes for sale to the Allies. He added:

"If this practice continues, I fear we will have no secrets as far as aviation is concerned."

Exports Delayed 6 Months

War Department officials said foreign orders of the P-40 would not interfere with its own procurement of the type, as deliveries will begin this month and should be completed according to schedule next year. Foreign exports will not start for six months, it was said, but which time the Curtiss company should be able to turn out both domestic and foreign orders without difficulty.

They also declared it was strict Army policy not to release any planes for foreign sale unless the United States has something much better on the way. While refusing to go into detail, officials hinted that their plans call for new pursuit planes which far excell the P-40.

Representative Harter waved aside such explanations, contending such plans were not yet realized, and that the Government should wait until it actually has something better before selling its latest equipment.

Navy Bill Up Today

Meanwhile, the House prepared to take up today the $656,000,000 naval expansion program, to add 43 ships and 1,000 war planes to the fleet. The two-ear authorization measure will be considered under a three-hour limitation of debate, which should bring a vote by late this evening or tomorrow.

Chairman Thomas of the Senate subcommittee on military appropriations will call the group together this morning to consider the War Department civil functions supply bill. President Roosevelt has asked that $15,000,000 in cash and $99,000,000 in contract authorization for starting a new set of bomb-proof Panama Canal locks be restored to the measure. The House eliminated funds for the project.

"The Army witnesses will have to convince me that the locks are needed," Senator Thomas said."

Commons Cheers Accord With Italy Over Coal Dispute

Copyright by New York Times

London, March 11.—Members of the House of Commons cheered Prime Minister Chamberlain's formal announcement today of the settlement of the Italian coal dispute and the prospects for the resumption of negotiations for bartering British coal and other raw materials in exchange for Italian airplane engines, automobile trucks and agricultural produce.

Referring to the British action holding up 13 Italian ships carrying 200,000 tons of German coal bound for Ital ylast week, and subsequently releasing them from contraband control on Saturday and the Italian agreement not to run the sea-blockade of Germany with more German coal shipments, Chamberlain said, amid applause:

"It may be hoped now that the way has been opened for the resumption of negotiations between our two countries for the furtherance of trade to our mutual advantage."

The commissioner said military police took three days to round up "all who were absent without leave."

Japanese Note Better Soviet Relations

Amercian Initiative In Cooperation Awaited, Says Tokyo

By Wilfrid Fleisher.
Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Tokyo (Tuesday), March 12.—Japan's relations with the Soviet Union are becoming closer, with prospects brightening for the conclusion of a trade agreement, the setting up of new boundary commission and a new fishery agreement while Japan's relations with the United States are at a standstill, awaiting some initiative from the American side.

This was the impression conveyed to foreign correspondents yesterday by Yakichiro Suma, spokesman of the foreign office.

Negotiations for a trade pact with Russia are making substantial progress in Moscow, Suma said, while talks for a new fishery agreement to replace the existing fishery pact extended from year to year, will be started very soon. Negotiations for the establishment of two special commissions, one to adjust boundary disputes and the other to delimit the frontiers of Manchukuo, Outer Mongolia and the Soviet Union, are reaching "the very last stage," he declared.

Arita Speech Recalled

Japan's desire for a general adjustment of relations with Russia was stressed by Foreign Minister Arita in his speech at the opening of the Diet on February 1.

Although Arita declared in the same speech to the Diet that he hoped American-Japanese relations would be restored to normalcy on a treaty basis, he has made no move to continue the talks which former Foreign Minister Nomura initiated with American Ambassador Grew at the close of last year. The foreign office spokesman stated yesterday that he did not foresee any likelihood of negotiations being resumed in the near future, and that Japan was awaiting a move from the American side.

"We have exhausted our efforts in attempting to improve relations with the United States," Suma said, "and we are now expecting something to come from the American side, in accordance with Secretary of State Hull's oft repeated statements."

Two Phases Noted

The spokesman went on to point out that American-Japanese relations fall into two phases, first, whether American rights and interests in China are being damaged by Japanese interests, and second, the question of principle on account of the "presumption" on the part of the United States that Japanese action in China constitutes aggression or invasion which has stirred ill-feeling against Japan in the United States.

"If American ill-feeling arises from damage to American rights and interests in China," he said, "we have been doing our best to alleviate the situation and to decrease the number of pending cases by adjustments, so the American Government and people should be well assured of Japanese sincerity.

"If, on the other hand, the United States and other powers, looking upon Japanese action in China as aggression, should take measures against Japan in interfering with the construction of a new order in East Asia, the Japanese people would be aroused to quite reasonable indignation," the spokesman said. "The China war is a big question which cannot be covered by the term 'aggression,' and Japan is sacrificing her national life and economy for its sake," he declared.

Argentine Pact Foreseen

Copyright by New York Times

Buenos Aires, March 11.—Argentina and Japan expect to sign a reciprocal trade treaty next month, it was learned from a reliable semi-official source today. As soon as the treaty is signed, it is planned to raise the diplomatic missions in Tokyo and Buenos Aires to the status of embassies.

The first reaction to these improved commercial and diplomatic relations came today in the issuance of a circular by the Argentine Exchange Control Bureau which in effect hands over to Japan this country's industrial chemical business, formerly an important item in imports from the United States.

For purposes of her import license system Argentina has divided the nations of the world into three categories. One group includes those to whom Argentina extends most-favored-nation treatment in the issuance of exchange control permits, which serve as import licenses. This group includes Great Britain, Germany, Italy and other countries with whom Argentina has bilateral trade agreements.

U. S. Least Favored

The second group is composed of the Scandinavian and South American countries, against whom certain quotas and other restrictions apply.

The third group has heretofore been composed only of the United States and Japan, which received the least favorable treatment. As a result of today's action the United States remains alone in group three.

The Exchange Control Bureau's circular creates a new group, numbering 22 nations, for purposes of licensing imports of industrial chemicals. This list includes all countries with whom Argentina does business, except the United States.

These imports are authorized at the favorable official rate of exchange, whereas imports from the United States cannot come in at any price.

Crippled Children to See Pinocchio in Premiere Here

Walt Disney, RKO-Keith's, The Post Cooperate to Give Them First Chance At Viewing the Newest Cartoon Epic

Washington is to have another movie premiere, one with no tall hats, no evening gowns, no stars in person, but an audience the like of which this town probably never has seen before.

The picture, which will be shown here first the morning of March 21, is Walt Disney's "Pinocchio." The audience will be composed of every crippled child, boy and girl, in Washington, who can get to RKO-Keith's Theater at 9 o'clock that morning.

Under joint auspices of The Washington Post, RKO-Keith's Theater and Disney, "Pinocchio," for which young America has been thoroughly prepared, will be seen first in Washington by these youngsters. No one else will be admitted, except necessary attendants, and no crippled child, in an institution or at home, need miss the show.

There won't even be the usual list of committees with big names to head them. All committee chairmen will be drawn from among the crippled children themselves; they will run the whole affair, arrange for transportation and take care of other details.

Before the first public showing of Pinocchio opens the morning of March 21, the audience of crippled children will have seen it from beginning to end. They will have been taken safely back to their homes or hospitals before the theater admits the clamoring horde of boys and girls expected for the first morning show.

Details will be published in The Post and flashed on the screen at Keith's.

Chlapowski, Pole Statesman, Dead, Daughter Here Is Told

Countess Marie Terese Lasocki, wife of Count Jerzy Lasocki, Polish Embassy Attache, yesterday learned of the death of her father, Alfred Chlapowski, in Koscian, Poland, from pneumonia he is believed to have acquired in a German concentration camp.

The date of the 66-year-old Polish statesman's death was not known and none of the circumstances of his passing were told in the cable from a relative in Paris.

Little was known of Mr. Chlapowski's whereabouts in recent months. Count and Countess Lasocki learned he had been arrested shortly after the Nazi invasion of Poland and confined in a concentration camp.

Mr. Chlapowski's estate was near Bonikaw, 15 miles from the old German-Polish frontier.

Besides serving as Polish Ambassador to France from 1924 to 1936, Mr. Chlapowski was Minister of agriculture in the Polish cabinet and deputy for western Poland in the German Reichstag before the World War.

His wife, Helen Chlapowski, is with friends in Krakow, Count Lasocki said.

RFC to Lend $57,000,000 On N. Y. Tunnel

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones announced last night that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation had agreed to purchase $57,000,000 of bonds from the New York City Tunnel Authority to finance construction of the proposed Battery Tunnel in New York.

Jones made public a letter to Mayor LaGuardia informing him of the corporation's action.

The RFC, it said, will purchase the bonds to bear 3½ per cent interest, at par and accrued interest as the funds are needed to finance construction of the tunnel.

New York, March 11 (INS).—The proposed Battery-Brooklyn tunnel would operate as a vehicular tube for general traffic between Manhattan and Brooklyn.

Total cost of the project is estimated at $80,000,000. The sum received from the RFC would be amortized and financed by tolls. Plans call for a double-deck tunnel highway—one for slow truck traffic, the other for high speed passenger traffic.

Welles Speaks With George VI On London Call

Roosevelt's Envoy Silent on Conferences With British Officials

By James MacDonald
Copyright by New York Times

London, March 11.—Against a background of diplomatic tension in the various European capitals, United States Undersecretary of State Welles began the London phase of his fact-finding mission today. But, as in the case of his visits to Rome, Paris and Berlin, the nature of his consultations remained a secret.

Welles' official activities today consisted of long conversations with Viscount Halifax at the foreign office, with Prime Minister Chamberlain at 10 Downing street, and an audience with the King at Buckingham Palace this afternoon followed by tea with the King and Queen. Tonight he was the guest of Viscount Halifax at a private dinner.

Welles took out time to give an interview in the morning to reporters at the United States Embassy, at the same time maintaining his reputation for reticence, his most frequent answer to questions being "no comment."

Denies Forecast on War

However, he took advantage of the interview to deny a report printed in a London newspaper that he had privately told friends that the war would extend and that the Allies would have difficulty in beating Germany.

When asked about the report Welles looked annoyed. He answered, "I have not expressed any views to friends or to any individuals who are not friends, either. If that sort of story crops up again I would ask all of you to remember what I have said."

Welles emphasized that any views given to him by a member of any government he has seen in Europe are absolutely confidential and solely for the information of President Roosevelt.

Orders Six Suits

In the forenoon, Welles visited his London tailor, from whom he ordered six suits, and then went for an automobile drive through Hyde Park. Following the press interview at noon he had luncheon with Ambassador Kennedy in the embassy.

Welles and the Ambassador called at the foreign office and conferred with Viscount Halifax for an hour.

Then Welles and Kennedy drove to Buckingham Palace, from which a small crowd saw them depart after 85 minutes.

The two American diplomats called on Chamberlain for another lengthy official conversation.

Welles is scheduled to hold a discussion with Winston Churchill, Anthony Eden, Maj. Clement R. Attlee and Sir Archibald Sinclair before leaving here on Thursday for Rome via Paris.

"Says Little, Very Well"

At the press interview Welles said:

"I would like to emphasize that I have no proposals to make nor commitments to offer in the name of my Government. I am here solely on a fact-finding tour. Having made that as clear as I possibly can, if there are any questions I can answer in view of these limitations I have set I shall be very glad to attempt to do so."

The rest of the interview was such that the Evening News headlined its story:

"Mr. Welles said little—but said it very well."

This paper said that Welles wore a perfectly cut blue suit like an Englishman, talked like an Englishman and behaved as "an Englishman would like to behave."

Bilbo Delays Deficiency Bill For $92,769,021

By the Associated Press

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, blocked in the Senate late yesterday passage of a $92,769,021.52 deficiency bill which carried $60,000,000 for the 1939-40 soil conservation program.

The Mississippi Senator asked that the measure go over until today because he had not had time to study it.

Previously, the chamber had approved a series of committee amendments boosting the total in the bill $2,699,882.91 above the amount approved by the House.

Ex-Cossack Cooks His Way To U. S. That Son Might Dance

Peter Eglevsky. He Cooked His Way to Washington

Colonel, Who Now Owns a Restaurant, Will Outdo Himself for Boy but Probably Ballet Russe Performer Will Turn It Down

Peter Eglevsky rested his thick arms on a table in his restaurant at 1724 Connecticut avenue northwest yesterday and told how he cooked his way from Constantinople to Washington that his son, Andre, might place his name close to Nijinsky and Volinine as a great ballet dancer.

Once a colonel of cossacks in the White Russian army, Peter Eglevsky looks on his career only as the answer to "How to live?"

Yet, while his hands are busy preparing Russian delicacies, his heart is with the boy, Andre, who comes to Washington today as a dancer with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo. The group is appearing tonight and tomorrow night at Constitution Hall.

"How to live? That was the question when I came out of Russia to Constantinpole in 1920," said Eglevsky. "What can a colonel in the Russian army do? I knew how to eat, but not how to cook. I was poor as church mouse."

He obtained a job as overseer of a hospital kitchen in Constantinople and sent his money to his wife and young boy in France.

"I began to look into all the pots and pans. I began to see what went in and what came out," said Eglevsky, "and by and by I, too, could cook."

Andre contracted pneumonia at Nice, France, when he was 7 years old. The father wrote to send him to a dancing school for exercise. Then Eglevsky came to New York and obtained a job as cook. Another letter came from the dancing master at Nice saying: "The boy is good. He is another Nijinsky. Send him to Volinine's school in Paris."

Eglevsky cooked more, sent more money to France. When he came to Washington in 1929, he was receiving the first newspaper clippings about Andre. The boy came to America, visited his father, traveled widely. As his fame increased, his father's scrapbook grew thicker.

Now Eglevsky sits at a table in his restaurant or works busily in his kitchen. Andre will be here soon, and he will be cooking shashlik and other delicacies. And Andre will say, "But, Papitchka, I cannot eat this and dance too. Bring me some orange juice."

One new ballet and two old favorites with Washington audiences will be featured at today's 8:30 p. m. performance in association with the National Symphony Orchestra. "Rouge et Noire," "Les Sylphides," and "Gaite Parisienne" are the ballets to be performed.

Tanner Denies Peace Pact, Says Moscow Talks Continue

By the United Press

New York, March 11.—Vaino A. Tanner, Finland's foreign minister, told the United Press by telephone from Helsinki today that Russian and Finnish peace negotiators still are meeting in Moscow and may possibly reach a decision tomorrow.

He denied reports that any agreement had been reached and rumors that the Finnish mission had left the Soviet capital.

Until negotiations have been concluded, he said at 1:45 p. m., all reports as to terms and demands should be considered rumors.

When the United Press telephoned him Saturday, Tanner said he expected a decision on war or peace "by Monday or Tuesday."

Rumors that peace had been agreed upon swept Scandinavian capitals today and the United Press telephoned the Finnish foreign minister again.

"Has an agreement been reached by the negotiators in Moscow?" he was asked.

"No, not yet," he replied.

"Where is the Finnish mission?"

"The premier and the mission are in Moscow," Tanner said.

Asked when a decision might be expected, Tanner replied:

"Maybe tomorrow."

He said fighting continues on all Finnish fronts. It will continue, he reiterated, if the Moscow negotiators do not obtain acceptable terms.

The matter of dealing with these terms, he said, will have to await word from the mission in Moscow as to what the Russians would offer. He indicated that the mission could reject the Russian proposals or return with terms to be considered by the Finnish cabinet and Parliament.

Nazis to Spare Norse Ships, Oslo Is Told

Reich Acknowledges Their Right to Sail In British Waters

By the Associated Press

Oslo, March 11.—Informed Norwegian circles declared tonight that Germany has given Norway direct assurance that Norwegian ships which do not sail in convoy or which journey between neutral ports will not be attacked, although they will be subject to examination under prize law.

The new assurance, these sources said, further acknowledges the right of Norwegian ships to sail in British waters since, it was stated, Germany has promised that Norwegian ships traveling in ballast to British ports or returning to Norway with coal or similar ladings will not be attacked.

In Norwegian shipping circles the announcement was greeted with enthusiasm.

Sunk in Neutral Traffic

Theoretically, it was pointed out, shipping to neutral ports has been safe, but in reality Norwegian ships have been sunk while engaged in neutral traffic as well as in traffic to Great Britain.

The newspaper Aftenposten quoted The Halvorsen, leading shipping man, to the effect that the German promise was obtained between February 19 and February 23 but was not published pending official German confirmation.

Halvorsen was quoted as pointing out that no Norwegian ship had been attacked since the promise was given him in Berlin.

(Norwegian dispatches on February 21 said that up to that point Norway's losses in the war at sea had been 49 ships, totaling 168,527 tons, and 327 lives.)

Informed opinion here was that similar treatment would be accorded Swedish, Danish and possibly all neutral shipping.

Dutch Ship Sinks

Amsterdam, March 11 (AP).—The Netherlands steamer Amor, 2,325 tons, sank today after striking a mine in the North Sea. The crew of 33 was rescued.

Cold Compels Roosevelt to Rest

Appeals Court Hits District Adoption Rules

District Tribunal Told To Protect Children; Barnes Case Sent Back

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday criticized failure of the District Court to make rules to "provide full protection for the interests" of a child involved in adoption proceedings.

The court, in an opinion by Justice Fred Vinson, ordered a new trial on the petition of Lieut. Col. Theodore Barnes, Chemical Warfare Service, retired, and his wife, Mrs. Katherine Kolb Barnes, to adopt Mrs. Barnes' two sons.

The boys, Jean Jacques Paanakker, 15, and Peter Anthony Paanakker, 13, are the sons of Mrs. Barnes and Matthew B. A. Paanakker, a Dutchman who is a naturalized British subject but lives in France.

Justice Vinson's opinion said that "for a financial consideration, he (Paanakker) undertook to consent conditionally to the adoption." One condition was that Paanakker retain the right to visit his sons and he refused to waive it in the District Court hearing on the adoption petition.

The District Court rejected the petition without questioning the boys, appointing counsel to protect their interests or directing investigation beyond that required by the District adoption law.

Justice Vinson commented that the statutory investigation "apparently, does not include investigation of the character of a natural parent not a petitioner, and no report was made in respect to this matter—a vital issue in these proceedings."

Some details of the case remained obscure because the adoption law cloaks all proceedings in the District Court in absolute secrecy. The Court of Appeals ordered the record impounded on motion of Attorney B. Woodruff Weaver, who appeared for Col. and Mrs. Barnes.

Weaver said the boys, who were at a Laurel, Md., school when the hearing was held, were now at a school near Philadelphia.

Bishop Oldham Urges Revival Of Christianity

Principles Need to Be Applied in the World, He Says in Lenten Rites

The need for the application of Christian principles in worldly affairs was emphasized by the Right Rev. G. Ashton Oldham, Bishop of Albany, N. Y., at noon Lenten services in the Church of the Epiphany yesterday.

He quoted the opening words of the 127th Psalm: "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it," and called it "a truth that is desperately needed today."

Declaring that man has left God out of international affairs, he held that Christianity as a principle has never been tried there. In world affairs, he said, the Christian church is needed today as never before. He said that man in all the field of human and social relationships has not advanced as he has in the fields of science, and urged that Christians do what they can to make character keep pace with progress lest a machine be created that will turn and destroy its maker.

Bishop Oldham is conducting a series of daily Lenten addresses at the Church of the Epiphany.

The Rev. Bernard I. Barnes, pastor of North Carolina Avenue Methodist Church, speaking at Penn Theater yesterday in the daily services of Southeast churches, adopted the theme of brotherly love, urging love "with an up-reach to God and an outreach to man."

John Paul Jones' Commission To Be Handed to Navy Today

High Officials Will Receive Paper Lost 90 Years, Place It In Crypt of Revolutionary Hero

The original commission of oJhn Paul Jones as an officer of the American Navy, lost since 1850, will be delivered to naval officials today.

Secretary Edison will receive the treasured relic from a representative of John L. Senior, a New York businessman, who recently discovered the parchment and purchased it from a private collector. It will be placed in the crypt of the Revolutionary War hero at the Naval Academy.

High Navy officials will gather in Edison's office for a solemn ceremony of presentation. Capt. H. A. Baldridge, curator of the Naval Academy Museum, acting for Mr. Senior, will formally place it in the hands of the Navy.

Capt. Dudley A. Knox, chief of the division of Naval records and library at the Navy Department, said the document had been feared irretrievably lost. Circumstances of its discovery were not known here.

The commission is dated October 10, 1776, and signed by John Hancock, as president of the Continental Congress. It is somewhat damaged, and will be held as a loan from Mr. Senior pending arrangements for its restoration.

2 Army Fliers Die In Flaming Crash

Sharon Springs, Kans., March 11 (AP).—Two Army fliers, Maj. Devereux Myers and Corpl. Maurice E. Melvin, crashed in flames in the wild, fog-shrouded hill country southwest of here last night and were killed.

Myers' body was buried under the wreckage and was almost cremated. Melvin was thrown clear. The ship was an A-17-A type (Northrup) low-wing attack monoplane. Maj. Myers, 52, was born at Petersburg, Va.

Postlude

Ruby Smith Stahl directs the Washington Choir A Cappella in its ninth annual Lenten concert Monday evening in Constitution Hall.

Excellent choral singing was enjoyed last evening by an audience assembled in Constitution Hall for the ninth annual Lenten concert of the Washington Choir A Cappella of First Congregational Church under the direction of its capable conductor, Ruby Smith Stahl. In the balcony were hundreds of young people from the schools in attendance as guests of the choir, and their intent listening showed their appreciation.

Ray C. Brown

This well-trained choir deserves every whit of the reputation it has earned in this city and elsewhere during the last few years. In balance of voices, precision of attack and intonation, and graduation of dynamics it reveals the results both of meticulous guidance on the part of the director and of zeal on the part of the singers. The growth of the organization in technical skill has been steady and its artistic standards consistently high.

The program began with Bach's "Glory Now to Thee Be Given," and the first group included Mabel Daniels' interesting "Christmas in the Wood," Hubert Parry's "Welcome Yule" in folk style, Geoffrey Shaw's "How Far Is it to Bethlehem," Alexander Chesnokov's "Let Thy Blessed Spirit" and Noble Cain's "The Music of Life."

A polyphonic motet, "Cantate Domino," by Heinrich Schuetz, opened the second group as an example of seventeenth century church music. History repeats itself in an oddly spiral way, and long before the epoch of the three great B's—Bach, Beethoven and Brahms—there were three great S's among German composers—Heinrich Schuetz, of Dresden; Johann Hermann Schein, of Leipzig, and Thomas Selle, of Hamburg. Of these, the most eminent was Schuetz, who was influential in softening the Teutonic style with Italian graces. This motet is strongly Italiante in phrasing and in harmonic treatment.

Deane Shure's "Red River in the Night," which had its first performance by the choir to which it is dedicated, is a composition remarkable for imaginative quality and for deft part-writing. The composer searched long for a spiritual of that title which he had been told Negro soldiers had sung in France. Failing to discover it, he wrote this work in the manner and in the exalted mood of a spiritual. The music is impressive, deeply felt and genuine in the fervor of its inspiration.

Other numbers in the second group were Grachaninov's brilliantly scored "Holy Radiant Light." Edward Bairstow's "I Sat Down in His Shadow," Schubert's setting of Psalm XXIII, for male voices, and Shaw's "An Easter Alleluia."

Brahms' motet, "Grant Unto Me the Joy of Thy Salvation," introduced the concluding group, and was followed by Justus Wetzel's "Ave Maria," Christiensen's "Lullaby," Clarence Dickinson's arrangement of "Bring a Torch," John Trowbridge's "Grace Be Unto You" and Nikolski's "The Earth Is the Lord's."

Policeman Asks Parents to Help In Safety Drive

Cooperation of parents as well as precautions taken by the Police Department and schools are necessary for the safety of Washington children, Policeman Charles C. Brown last night told a meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association at the Oyster School, Twenty-ninth street and Calvert road northwest.

Members of the school safety patrol gave a demonstration of safety measures Officer Brown, stationed at the school, had taught them.

Urging parents to "add a word to what the police say" about safe conduct on District streets, Brown pointed out that alleys and side streets are the most dangerous for children, and that most accidents befalling children occur between 4 and 7 p. m.

District Plans to Take Fight for Tax Powers to Supreme Court in Appeal

Effort to Evade Income Levy To Be Opposed

Repeal Move Gains As Ruling Exempts Out-of-Area Residents

"I have always preferred the income tax," Kennedy said, "but this court decision would seem to make it inequitable if not unworkable here because of the peculiar political character of the District. However, I still have an open mind if proponents of the income tax can find a solution of the present muddle."

If Kennedy votes for the Pond-Seal substitute, the bill will be reported to the full District Committee as both Chairman Nichols and Representative Dan R. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, have advocated a local sales tax for several years.

Dirksen Is Surprised

The decision took Representative Everrett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, sponsor of the local income tax, by surprise. He said he wanted time to study the court ruling before making a statement.

Representative George Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, also an income tax proponent, was out of the city.

Senator John H. Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on District appropriations, said he had expected the court ruling.

"That's what we understood when the law was drafted last year," he said. "We never expected the tax would raise any large amount of money, or that it would apply to the salaries of Government employes."

Overton Urges Caution

Senator Overton, while professing his preference for a sales tax or the Pond formula, warned against hasty action by Congress.

"We should go very slow about repealing this law," he said. "There's not much time for Congress to consider and enact a satisfactory substitute revenue measure."

A hint that the confused tax situation might have its effect on the 1941 District supply bill was given by members of the House subcommittee at the conclusion of its first day's hearing on budgetary estimates.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, however, while urging that the income tax be repealed, said he saw no reason for curtailing the District's appropriations, as the split-income tax law recently enacted authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to advance funds to the District.

"The income tax law won't raise enough money, though," he said, "and I think that the only solution is for Congress to adopt the Pond formula of a 2 per cent sales tax combined with a personal income tax starting on salaries over $10,000."

Maj. Donovan said he anticipated a return of $1,000,000 from the personal income tax if there were no wholesale exemptions. He declined to predict the financial effect of the court ruling.

Collections Will Continue

Seal warned last night that collections will continue of District income taxes, and that returns must be in by April 15, when at least half of the total tax is due.

A good idea of the public reaction to the matter was to be seen on the first floor of the District Building, however. Shortly after noon, some 300 persons were in line to file income tax returns. As word of the Court of Appeals action spread, the line dwindled to a few local residents who could not claim domicile elsewhere.

A few voiced the intent of "waiting until this thing is straightened out" before filing returns. Allen Brooke, who is in charge of collections, said business was less than usual during the afternoon.

Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the Board of District Commissioners, said, "I don't know what's going to happen," and declined to comment further, pending study of the decision.

Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the District board of tax appeals, who had ruled that Sweeney was subject to the intangibles tax on the theory that Sweeney actually is domiciled in the District, declined to comment.

Some weeks ago, however, Morgan indicated that in his opinion the court's ruling in the Sweeney case would have great importance in the administration of the income tax law.

Evidence Must Be Shown

Seal pointed out that all who wish to avail themselves of the Sweeney case decision to avoid district taxation must show "tangible evidence that they are domiciled elsewhere."

"They must show individually some tangible proof that they have a voting residence and actually have voted in another State or pay State taxes outside the District," he said. He repeated that all who reside within the District must file income tax returns, even though the returns are filed under protest.

Sweeney convinced the court that despite long residence in the District, he had retained legal residence in Massachusetts.

The threat to the income tax law recalls the agreement by experts that the most equitable income tax law for the District would be on income received from within the District, regardless of domicile; but Congress would not consider this because Congressmen's salaries would be taxed under such a law.

Justice Wiley Rutledge said that the controlling factor was Sweeney's state of mind about his residence, in the course of an opinion representing the views of himself, Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner and Justice Henry W. Edgerton.

Artist's Model Passes Bar

Grace Tainsh, who four years ago was voted the most beautiful girl at New York University, realized her ambition yesterday when, after passing the bar examination, she was sworn in as an attorney. Grace had worked her way through school as an artist's model. Later she got a job with a New York insurance firm and continued her studies.

Sweeney Tells Of Fight on Tax

where lay his domicile arose back in 1938. In his files is a letter, involving an incident which might man like Sweeney sore. On September have been calculated to make a tember 7, 1938, he addressed C. A. Russell, the deputy assessor, in part, as follows:

"Thank you for your letter of September 3, 1938, advising that you will give me a hearing on Wednesday, September 28, at 9:30 a. m., on my claim that I am a legal resident of Boston, Mass. Referring to the matter contained in the second paragraph of your letter, the reason that prompted me to request a hearin before a Commissioner or Commissioners of the District of Columbia is that when I called at your office during the latter part of July to discuss the matter with one of your associates, he stated in substance that 'persons who don't like our laws, don't have to stay here,' and further 'you are just like so many of the other clerks in the Government service who stay here year after year and claim to reside in the States.' Obviously, I was very much concerned that the person or persons conducting the hearing requested by me should be fair and unbiased. Very truly yours,

"J. J. SWEENEY."

This shows that as far back as September 7, 1938, Sweeney was convinced he belonged to Massachusetts and would bear down on the fact when necessary.

Definition of Court Ruling on Residence

Yesterday's ruling that though a man may live in the District an indefinite period, but have his domicile elsewhere, makes the distinctions between home, residence and domicile, of interest to the taxpayers' pocketbook. Here are some definitions:

Domicile—Residence at a particular place accompanied with an intention to remain there for an unlimited time, even without one's physical presence there. (Thus Sweeney is domiciled in Massachusetts.)

Home—The house in which one lives with one's family. (The apartment in which Sweeney lives.)

Britain and Norway Conclude Trade Pact

D. C. Labor Law Change Returned to Committee By 183 to 134 Vote

District Commissioners from decisions of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board denying renewal of licenses and to curtail the use of expired Congressional automobile tags.

License Inquiry Continues

The amendment to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act was adopted despite the fact that the Eberharter subcommittee investigating liquor licensing has not completed its inquiry. Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the board, is to be heard this morning.

The measure relating to Congressional tags specifies that they shall expire shortly after the adjournment of each Congress. The committee reported that "certain abuses" have arisen "through the use of old tags by other than members of Congress after the new ones have been issued."

During the discussion of the inaugural resolutions Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, said that the Republicans wouldn't "need a dime" for the ceremony. Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, responded that "everybody will be here to see President Roosevelt inaugurated for a third term."

New Yorkers Support Bill

New York City members of the House joined District Committee members in support of the child labor law amendment, which would have permitted a juvenile of any age to appear in a legitimate theater at night or in a musical recital or concert if a permit were granted by the Board of Education.

Representatives Sol Bloom and Celler both called attention to the fact that the present law bars juvenile prodigies from the National Capital and prevents local theaters and radio stations from giving talented children an opportunity to perform.

The acting District Committee chairman, Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, complained that the opposition to the legislation came from "self-appointed dictators' who "object to everything." Public hearings were held on the bill in 1932 and 1935, he said.

G. O. P. Opposition Solid

Representative Marcantonio (Republican), of New York, opened the fight against the bill and demanded a quorum call when Schulte attempted to call it up over his protest.

Later he charged that the bill would open the door to "the most pernicious racket that operates in my city." He explained he referred to theatrical agencies which exploited talented children.

After other Republican members joined in the attack, Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, made the motion for recommittal with the backing of Majority Leader Martin. On a standing vote, which preceded the roll call, the Republican membership stood almost solidly against the bill along with a scattering of Democrats.

Representative Sumner (Republican), of Illinois, kept up a constant barrage against the bill throughout the hour's debate although her colleague, Representative Dirksen, told the House he had no objection to it but regretted that the committee had held no hearings.

Celler recited a list of notable plays which could not be staged in the District because of the ban on juvenile performers. Dirksen pointed out that Shirley Temple cannot appear on a local stage.

"Why don't we quit wasting the time of the House on this bill," boomed John C. Schafer, "and take up the Shulte milk bill to break up this local monopoly?"

of charwomen to be mulcted of 2 per cent of their pay" for party funds.

Majority Leader Barkley, continuing his opposition to the stand of Assistant Leader Minton, was joined by Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, in contending there was not need for haste in farm bill action, since none of its funds are to be spent until after July 1.

Minton heatedly attacked Republicans who have supported Hatch throughout the fight. He charged the Republicans were trying to "Hatch-et" the Democrats out of Washington and were maintaining a "holier-than-thou" attitude.

"This certainly is strange," he said, "coming from the heirs of Warren G. Harding, Albert B. Fall and Harry Daugherty."

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, pleaded with the Senate not to displace his measure, declaring such action would mean "it is dead for this session."

Passer of 200 Phony Checks Gets 9 Years

A blacksmith, whose specialty was rubber checks staggered yesterday under the burden of the heaviest sentence handed down in Police Court in ten years.

SMITH

Wanted in 35 cities, Andrew Frank Smith, 32, of 1337 Meridian place northwest, was sentenced to nine years after proudly admitting manufacture of "at least 200" bad checks in the Southeast. His ingenious scheme deceived 19 Washington merchants since May, 1939, and collapsed Thursday when he sought a charge account with a clothing merchant who, the same week, had received a copy of Smith's picture and a photostat of one of his checks broadcast to Washington retailers.

Smith told Judge Curran he posed as a cook at a "local CCC camp" in passing his checks for $5 to $22.50. All were made out by typewriter to Smith, some marked "pay as canteen steward," all stamped in large block letters, "CCC Company 604," and all signed F. A. Harris, Capt. Inf.-Res. Smith said he bought the stamp in Waco, Tex., and invented Capt. Harris himself.

Charles Knuckles, Restaurant Man, Active Mason, Dies

Charles Thomas Knuckles, 40, restaurateur and active Mason, died suddenly yesterday.

A native of Pineville, Ky., Mr. Knuckles was a member of the George C. Whiting Lodge No. 2 and Eagles Chapter, Masonic, and the Order of Elks. Surviving are his wife, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Knuckles; two brothers, James E. and Jacob C. Knuckles, and four sisters, the Misses Fannie and Viola Knuckles, Mrs. Kitty Condor and Mrs. Dolora Laws.

The funeral will be at 11 a. m. Thursday at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

House Tables Move to Probe Army Cot Use

Delegates to Youth Congress Were Kept At Fort Myer

The House yesterday tabled a resolution seeking information as to quarters furnished by the Army to members of the American Youth Congress here last month, after Secretary Woodring assured Congress there had been no cost to the Government.

Reporting on a resolution sponsored by Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, to determine the authority for lodging the delegates at Fort Myer, Va., February 10 and 11, the War Secretary said the appeal for aid had come "directly to Fort Myer from the White House."

"The action taken," Mr. Woodring said, "was by virtue of the authority reposing in any military commander to relieve distress in cases of emergency."

Hoffman, however, was not satisfied with the Army report. He told the House accommodations had already been reserved for the delegates at two Washington hotels which were not used.

He demanded to know why "an organization which harbors Communists" should be favored when "a religious and patriotic" organization previously had been denied help by the Army," and inserted in the record a letter from the department to an order called the "United Boys Brigades of America" refusing a requested loan of cots and blankets on the ground it was illegal.

The Michigan representative said that the appeal for Fort Myer authorities to house the Youth Congress delegates had come from Mrs. Roosevelt. He put in the record a letter purporting to have been written by the latter to W. A. Koerner, of Baltimore, described as the national commander of the United Boys Brigades of America.

"The use of the Fort Myer riding hall was granted as an emergency for 150 boys who had no place to sleep," the letter read. "I was told they could probably not have cots, but tan bark is soft!

"I do not know what was done eventually, but I am sure regulations were strictly adhered to."

Secretary Woodring said Fort Myer authorities advised him that "reimbursement has been made of all funds expended" when the Youth Congress delegates were housed at the post. Members of the House Military Affairs Committee, which earlier in the day adversely reported the Hoffman resolution, said they had been informed Col. George Patton, Fort Myer commandant, paid for coffee and doughnuts.

Council Shows How to Reduce Social Evils

54 Violators Excused, 20 Tags Cancelled, Weekly Report Shows

Two Representatives had traffic tickets adjusted for themselves, one for the second time in two weeks, and a third adjusted a parking ticket for a friend last week, police revealed yesterday.

The three members of Congress were listed in the weekly report issued by the Police Department under orders from the Commission. There were 54 violators excused with warning last week, and 20 tickets were canceled outright.

Representative C. Arthur Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, received a warning for parking in a driveway entrance. He pleaded that he was on official business. The Missourian was listed for a similar ticket adjustment last week.

A ticket given to Representative Clarence J. McLeod (Republican), of Michigan, for parking in a driveway entrance was canceled when he told police that his car was pushed after he parked it.

Vreeland Fixes Ticket

Iolanda and J. E. Dwyer, of 3610 Quesada street northwest, escaped with a warning for parking in a restricted area with the notation "Request of Congressman Vreeland." Representative Albert Vreeland is a New Jersey Republican.

Not since the first week of publication in October have so many members of Congress appeared on the list in one week. The first published report contained the name of five Representatives and one Senator.

Last week 6 diplomats escaped through diplomatic immunity, 8 persons pleaded successfully that they were on emergency business, and 14 said their cars were disabled. Six claimed that their cars were pushed after they parked. 8 were strangers in the city, 4 were ill, 4 had no previous record and 9 said they had just parked momentarily.

Finn Solicitor Escapes

Charles J. Mahan, of 2019 Massachusetts avenue northwest, escaped with a warning because he was soliciting Finnish relief. Charles H. Thompson, of Keyser, W. Va., was awarded a cancellation because he was under arrest for violation of the coal truck law. The cancellation was requested by Inspector J. M. Buscher, of the Bureau of Weights and Measures.

Leroy Ford, of 734 Seventh street southeast, and Robert E. H. Hanna, of 214 Fourth street southeast, received warnings because the policemen who gave them the tickets changed their minds. Both warnings were requested by the officers who issued the tickets.

P. K. Chaconas, of 401 Morse street northeast, received a cancellation with the notation "operator parked truck and was later arrested for robbery."

Detective Sergt. Alton S. Bradford, of 1639 West Virginia avenue northeast, was waiting for a robbery suspect at the suspect's home and his car looked so unlike a police car that Private A. R. Newcomb, of the Traffic Division, gave him a ticket for parking over time. The ticket was canceled at the order of Inspector L. I. H. Edwards.

Those whose tickets were canceled because of diplomatic immunity were Meredith S. Watts, of 922 Twenty-fourth street northwest, an employe of the Polish Embassy; Joseph Barbecot, of the French Embassy; Fausto Madrid, of the Mexican Embassy; Henry Lazard, of the Argentine Embassy, and David A. Costro, of the El Salvadore Legation. Barbecot was listed twice.

River, Harbor, Flood Groups To Meet Today

Hundreds of Projects Under Study; Formal Sessions on Tomorrow

Committee meetings of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress will be held at the Mayflower Hotel today prior to general sessions of the Congress Thursday and Friday. Officials of the Mississippi Valley Flood Control Association also will meet there today.

Hundreds of waterway, flood control, reclamation, irrigation and conservation projects will be considered by the Congress' Projects Committee at today's meetings.

Keynote of the convention will be waterway improvement as an adjunct to national defense, the Congress stated yesterday. It reported a statement from President Roosevelt congratulating the Congress on its "comprehensive and integrated program."

"It is gratifying at a time when world events force us to attend more closely our system of national defense," the President was quoted, "to know that the National Rivers and Harbors Congress has through the years of its existence advocated a national development of our waterways, an element of our communication system essential to the safety and defense of the Nation."

Speakers at the convention will include Senators Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky; McNary (Republican), Oregon; Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama; Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina; Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma; Representatives Rayburn (Democrat), Texas; Martin (Republican), Massachusetts; Whittington (Democrat), Mississippi; Snyder (Democrat), Pennsylvania; Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, Governor-elect Sam Houston Jones of Louisiana, and Rear Admiral Emory S. Land. Representative Short (Republican), Mississippi, is president of the congress.

Roosevelt Makes 3 Colonels Quartermaster Corps Generals

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated three Army colonels to be assistant quartermaster generals at the War Department.

CORBIN

The appointments bring a complete turnover in the high command of the Quartermasters Corps. Col. Edmund Gregory has already been named to succeed Maj. Gen. Henry Gibbins as Quartermaster General April 1, and yesterday's nominations will replace Gibbins' three assistants.

War Department officials said the incumbents all complete their four-year terms this year and that approved policy limits officers to one term in such posts. The new appointees, all of whom will be brigadier generals, are:

Col. Clifford L. Corbin to succeed Brig. Gen. Augustus B. Warfield, whose term expires April 1.

Col. Joseph E. Barzynski to succeed Brig. Gen. Richard H. Jordan, whose term expires July 31.

HARTMAN

Col. Charles D. Hartman to succeed Brig. Gen. A. Owen Seaman, who will retire July 31, on his own application.

Col. Corbin, 57, is a native of Vandalia, Ohio, and da 1905 graduate from West Point. He served with the Field Artillery in France in 1918, and later was assistant chief quartermaster of the American forces in Germany. In 1934 he was chief of the American Graves Registration Service in Paris and now is on duty at the New York General Depot.

BARZYNSKI

Col. Barzynski, now chief of the personnel branch of the quartermaster general's office here, was born in St. Paul, Nebr. He was graduated from West Point in 1905 and in the World War was quartermaster of the Thirty-second Division.

Col. Hartman, 55, was born in Brookhaven, Miss., and graduated from West Point in 1908. He received the Distinguished Service Medal for World War duty in charge of all Army utilities in the United States.

2 Seized in N. Y. After Complaints By Investors Here

New York, March 11 (AP).—Frederick L. Moran, 48, of New Rochelle, N. Y., and Harry Prager, 43, of the Bronx, were arrested today on grand larceny and forgery charges growing out of their connection with the National Unit Corporation, an investment trust, which had assets of $118,000.

According to the indictment, whenever an account became dormant, Moran and Prager wrote to the People's Pittsburgh Trust Co., trustee of the investment firm, informing the bank that the dormant account owner wished to withdraw his deposits. The bank would send a check for the full amount to New York, and Moran or Prager, the indictment said, would forge the name of the payee to the check.

The five who complained and the amounts they said they lost were Capt. William W. Jervey, United States Army War College, Washington, $800; Constance M. and Susan B. Barry, of the Bronx, who paid in, respectively, $500 and $1,500; Herbert Ralph Ward, a Trenton, N. J., church organist, $394.28, and Frank T. Parsons jr., of 1320 Fourteenth street northwest, Washington, a stationery jobber, who had invested $600.

then hurried the prisoner to headquarters to see whether the 25-year-old "gunless gunman" could be identified as the dapper, soft-spoken robber who escaped with $500 from the Blackstone Hotel early yesterday.

The lobby of the hotel, 1016 Seventeenth street northwest, was deserted except for the clerk, Vernon Reuther, when a stranger entered and whipped out a nickel-plated revolver.

"Give me the cash drawer," he demanded.

Reuther told police he said there was nothing in the drawer, but the robber forced him to take it from the desk and place it on the floor. Ordering Reuther to "keep low" behind the desk, the intruder walked around to him, tossed the clerk a small canvas bag and made him empty the till into it. Then he put the bag in his coat pocket and walked out the front entrance.

Cleaning and Laundry Workers Meet Tonight

Coming negotiations with employers in the wholesale cleaning industry on wages, hours and general working conditions will be discussed at an open membership meeting of the Cleaners and Laundry Workers Union, Local 188B, at 8 p. m. today at the Y. W. C. A.

Local 188B, affiliated with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, C. I. O., now has closed-shop agreements with six wholesale clothing firms in the District, Jack Kutner, field organizer for the union, reported yesterday.

Norris Fears Bar to Progress In Job Tax Plan

O'Mahoney Proposal Would Be 'Stop-Sign on Road,' He Asserts

By the Associated Press

A proposal by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, to stimulate employment of manpower through taxation of profits from machine production brought a warning yesterday from Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, that such procedure might "put a stop sign along the road of human progress."

Norris took the floor after O'Mahoney had offered legislation to carry out his proposal and had heard Senators Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, express interest in the measure.

"We ought to hesitate a long time—I think forever," Norris told the Senate, "before we put a stop sign along the road of human progress. I'm afraid that's what this would have a tendency to do."

O'Mahoney replied that he would be the last to restrict technological advance, but contended his proposal would not do that.

Norris expressed the opinion that government should "welcome all technological improvements that reduce human labor" and then meet any ensuing problem of unemployment through a reduction in hours.

"We are going to have to reduce hours much more drastically without reducing the wages," Norris asserted. "We won't be able fully to meet the unemployment situation until we have done that."

O'Mahoney explained that rewards in the form of tax reductions or wage subsidies would be provided under his proposal for those who created opportunities for employment. These rewards would be financed by a "labor differential tax" to be assessed against profits arising from factors by which "labor costs are disproportionately reduced."

Arthur W. Aleshire, Once in House, Dies

Chosen from the Seventh Ohio District in 1936, he served one term in Congress.

Citizens See How to Reduce Social Evils

Neighborhood Council Group Presents Skit On Community Work

The Neighborhood Council Division of the Washington Council of Social Agencies turned to a dramatic skit yesterday to demonstrate how communities can mobilize citizenship against juvenile delinquencies and other social difficulties.

The skit, titled "Neighborhood Councils in Action," was given at the Y. W. C. A. before several hundred Council of Social Agencies members. James Ring, chairman of the Neighborhood Council Division, presided.

It was intended to show how leading citizens, with the cooperation of social agencies and police, can reduce social evils.

Taking parts were Mrs. James Welch, First Ward; Mrs. Etta V. Frye, Central; Miss Emily Tilton, North Washington; the Rev. Edward Gabler, Southeast; Miss Fern Chapman, Georgetown; Policeman Karl McCormick, Georgetown; Mrs. Olive J. Montgomery, U Street; Horace Christopher, U Street; Miss Mildred Green, Central; Robert W. Rewards For Employers

Most of the social legislation designed to improve the wages and working conditions of labor and provide greater security for workers adds to the production costs of industry and increases the pressure to introduce labor-saving machinery.

For example, pay-roll taxes levied to build up old-age insurance reserves, and to tide workers over periods of unemployment, fall heavily upon industries in which wages constitute a high percentage of operating costs. As a result, the incentive to speed up mechanization and dismiss workers is increased. And, as the cost of our social insurance program mounts, the pressure upon employers to find substitutes for labor will become even greater.

At a time when unemployment is abnormally high and the Government is creating jobs for the idle, it is obvious that employers should be encouraged to hire more workers instead of having their labor costs increased. The question arises, therefore, as to how a reemployment program can be made effective without forcing down labor costs at the expense of workers. How, for that matter, can the benefits of protective labor legislation be assured without aggravating the evils of unemployment?

Senator O'Mahoney is sponsoring a bill to reduce unemployment which attempts to grapple with this difficult question in a rather novel way. The measure is still in tentative form, but its introduction will serve to focus public attention upon a problem that calls for serious study. Briefly the plan is to reward employers whose output is obtained by a more than average use of man power, and to exact contributions from those whose output is secured by a more than average use of machinery. Thus, highly mechanized concerns with proportionately small wage bills would have less incentive to displace men and substitute machinery, while employers with comparatively large labor forces would be given positive inducements to maintain their organizations intact or to expand them.

The plan is much more intricate than would appear from this statement of purpose. For it is based upon so-called differential labor taxes and credits which are intended to set up a pay-as-you-go system financed by employers. Whether a proposal of this sort is administratively feasible, whether it would stimulate employment to the extent its sponsors assume, and whether it would effect a better balance between men and machines are matters open for discussion. But even if the rosy hopes of its advocates seem somewhat chimerical, the plan upon which the O'Mahoney bill is based should be carefully studied as a serious effort to encourage employment.

Letting Down The Bars

The Senate will soon consider a farm bill to which the Committee on Appropriations has added $309,000,000, chiefly to provide for parity payments and additional funds for removal of surplus farm products. Approximately $100,000,000 of this increase would be provided from other sources, but that is immaterial since the funds eventually come out of the same public treasury.

If this bill passes, the rather faint hope that the statutory debt limit will not be exceeded during the next fiscal year might as well be abandoned. For even if Congress were to vote additional taxes to cover parity payments, in accordance with the President's urgent recommendations, the estimated deficit for the coming year would bring indebtedness perilously close to the statutory limit. Furthermore, there is no emergency requiring the voting of parity payments—unless the coming Presidential election is to be regarded as creating a condition of political emergency.

If the Senate passes this swollen agricultural appropriation measure and the House acquiesces, nobody will be greatly surprised. But it will constitute a serious setback to an economy move that seemed to have genuine vitality. The oftener these abortive moves to cut expenses expire, the fainter becomes the hope that the spending urge will be restrained in time to avert financial collapse.

Congressmen who have their thoughts fixed upon the importance of propitiating pressure groups clamoring for uncontrolled spending are extremely short-sighted. They forget to consider the effect of their extravagance upon that large body of Americans who, alarmed by the endless succession of heavy deficits, are increasingly unwilling to plan for the future.

The deterrents to expansion of industry, which are the direct result of excessive spending, do much more than neutralize the direct stimulative effects of farm benefits and subsidies. And the farmer as well as other producers must suffer the consequences.

Our No Man's Land

Justice Rutledge's decision in the Sweeney case has knocked the bottom out of the District's revenue system. Its immediate effect is to create a fiscal crisis for the local government. Even beyond that, however, it sharpens the already acute problem of what the Capital City's future status should be.

The court decided that James J. Sweeney, an employe of the Department of Justice who has lived in Washington for the last 20 years, is nevertheless domiciled in Massachusetts. As a result, taxes assessed against his intangible personalty are invalid. That effect of the decision has little significance, for the levy on intangibles was repealed last year. But if Government employes who continue to live here year after year may claim a domicile elsewhere, they need not pay the District income tax which Congress enacted in 1939.

It is estimated that nearly 100,000 Washingtonians may thus escape the income tax. If this decision is sustained, the local income tax will have to be repealed. The court did not decide whether it is applicable to private employes who claim legal residence in the States. But, in any event, a District levy on income exempting Government employes would be discredited by that unwarranted discrimination.

Congress ought to face the issues realistically and begin work on a new District revenue bill. Enactment of some new tax will be essential to save the District from a large deficit. But what sort of tax can be devised to take the place of this equitable levy upon incomes? If neither intangible personalty nor income taxes can be applied to Government employes, it appears that Washington will have to rely principally upon property and sales taxes. Since the property tax is already too high, a stiff sales tax looms on the horizon.

The Court of Appeals brings forth some compelling arguments to sustain its conclusion. Application of the tax in the case at issue, it said, "would deprive of State domicilation and impose that of the District upon all Federal officials and employes required to live here in order to perform work without which the Government could not go on." The fact that collection of such taxes from Government employes "might be desirable as a matter of District taxing policy," the court said, "cannot outweigh the havoc it would work in other respects."

In short, the court decided that the opportunity of Government employes to perform their duty, which requires residence in the Nation's Capital, is not to be purchased by separation from their families nor severance of their allegiance to the States. Our dual system of government permits them to retain State privileges and obligations, if they wish, while serving the Nation. There can be no objection to this basic principle.

Nevertheless, the consequences of the decision must be clearly recognized. In effect, it cuts off much needed sources of revenue and throws back upon Congress the responsibility of providing the Capital with revenue from other sources. It means, as the court points out, that Government employes living in Washington who maintain their legal residence in the States, may be subject to payment of income taxes there, unless they give up their State allegiance and become domiciled in the District.

This effect of the decision should be given the closest scrutiny. It does not mean that Government employes retaining domicile in the States will escape District taxes. Washington must collect revenue from some sources. The decision simply means that this revenue must be collected largely through sales and property taxes involving no question of domicile. Consequently, many Federal employes who wish to retain their votes will probably be subjected to triple taxation. The fact that they will pay different types of levies in the District and in the States will not necessarily ease the burden.

As this situation is clarified, many Government employes are likely to give up their voting privileges in the States to escape increasing taxes. That is precisely the outcome which Congress wishes to avoid. The court has dumped not one but several confused and far-reaching problems into the lap of Congress.

Behind all of these problems arises the question as to whether the District, with its 625,000 inhabitants, is to remain a sort of no-man's land or to take its rightful place in this great democratic country. If Washington had some form of home rule, there would be less demand for the retention of voting rights in distant States. But so long as the Capital is regarded as merely a temporary abode for Federal servants its growing difficulties are certain to become more acute.

The Picture Clarifies

Although the course and possible outcome of the Russo-Finnish negotiations at Moscow remain wrapped in doubt, some light has now been thrown on the events leading up to that fateful meeting by the statement which Premier Chamberlain made in the House of Commons yesterday.

It is apparent from Mr. Chamberlain's disclosures that the initiative for the current peace negotiations came neither from Finland nor, as was first believed, from Sweden. It came from Russia herself which, as far back as February 22, approached the British government with a statement of peace terms to be transmitted by Great Britain to Finland.

Now it is of more than passing interest that it was Great Britain, a friend and supporter of Finland, rather than Germany, Russia's own ally, that the Soviet government first approached. Was this the product of the belief that a word from London would be enough to get the Finns to lay down their arms? Was it because Russia feared to make known to Hitler her desperate eagerness for peace and thus place the Soviet state more than ever at the mercy of its Nazi ally? Was it, perhaps, because Russia is far from satisfied with her alliance with the Third Reich and, as an offset, would like to improve her relations with Great Britain?

No one can answer these questions with complete assurance. Yet Stalin can hardly be happy that, as a consequence of the Finnish war, Hitler is now so obviously top dog in the German-Russian combination.

Mr. Chamberlain's statement also made it clear that however eager for peace Russia may have been on February 22, she was not then willing to retreat from the demands originally made on Finland, the rejection of which by the Helsinki government was followed by the Russian invasion. On the contrary, the terms which Ambassador Maisky informed the British government Russia was prepared to offer to Finland were so onerous that Great Britain refused to transmit them. They were then transmitted via Sweden.

In the meantime, there has been a clarification of the Allied position vis-a-vis Finland. Finland may decide that she has no alternative but to make peace with Russia. If, on the other hand, she rejects the more moderate terms which would now satisfy Stalin, she has the promise of getting Allied aid. Great Britain and France, said Mr. Chamberlain yesterday, are prepared in response to an appeal from the Finns for further aid, "to proceed immediately and jointly to the help of Finland, using all available resources at their disposal."

Finland may at this juncture decide not to ask for the military aid the Allies are prepared to give. But the stand of the Allies should in any event help stiffen Finland against a naked peace of capitulation. The fulminations in the Red press against Premier Ryti, the resumption of the bombardment by Red planes of Finnish civilian centers, suggest that this is what may have happened.

More than ever Europe appears to be at a turning point in its destinies.

Small Fry's Revenge

If David fought Goliath over again today, his battle would be made easier, for he would have working on his side the body has indicated that it is for the little man, or at least the one who is small in United States Court of Appeals. This stature. Its attitude was made evident in a recent opinion sanctioning a compensation award to one Ray Bridges for injuries he said he received in a physical encounter with a supervisor who called him "Shorty." Mr. Bridges is 5 feet 6 inches tall.

This notable decision might conceivably alter the course of history. As everyone knows, little men have played important roles in military conquests, and there are those who advance the theory that their pugnacity is a form of compensation for a complex. But now that the Court of Appeals awards compensation, the world may be spared many a battle. It seems almost catastrophic that this decision didn't occur earlier in the course of events.

For instance, if Louis XIV had grown up in the secure shadow of the United States Court of Appeals, he need never have worn high heels and involved Europe in a series of bloody wars. Napoleon might never have become emperor if he could have invoked this ruling against his comrades at school who slighted the young military genius.

But on the other hand, with such a decision, New York might have been deprived of its fighting Mayor, the Little Flower himself.

Boats In New York

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all this fuss about the H. M. S. Queen Elizabeth which just docked in New York? Why did the British government send the boat over in the first place?

Docked in New York City at the present time are the three largest boats in the world, the Normandie, the Queen Mary and now the Queen Elizabeth. It has been estimated that these boats as troop transports could accommodate over 50,000 American boys.

The present policy of the Roosevelt Administration—and the Republicans are no better—is as plain as the nose on Jimmy Durante's face; it is a policy involving the United States in Europe's war. Right now it is loans. What happens when our statesmen of both major political parties decide that these loans are in danger and we must protect them?

These boats in the Hudson River up in New York may be the last word in luxury, but the American citizens don't want to send their sons and brothers over to their graves in Europe on a fancy boat, or on any other kind of boat.

Sexual Anonymity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been considerable controversy in the papers lately about penguins, particularly regarding their sexual anonymity. In your issue of March 6, for instance, appeared a story in which it was stated—"the sex of a living penquin cannot be told."

That is pure balderdash!

To the au courant telling the sex of penquins has long been common knowledge. And it's really quite simple—get the penquin in question in a receptive humor. Then tell it one of the funniest stories you know. If he laughs, it's a male. If she laughs, it's a female. If it doesn't laugh, your story is no good.

Poll Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Leaders of radical organizations, labor leaders, mayors of Eastern and Northern cities, stage and screen stars, the First Lady of the land, in fact everybody except the sharecroppers themselves, have recently observed sharecroppers' week.

The average sharecropper will know no more about the observance of this week than a tree knows about a poem on "Trees." Why is the real victim of Southern landlordism immune to all types of militant reformism? The operation of an un-American and unconstitutional poll tax to disfranchise the sharecroppers accounts for their inertia and impotency in politics.

The sharecroppers are not merry morons singing cornfield songs and thanking God for poverty, filth and disease. They yearn for a home, economic security and intellectual freedom; but reactionary machine politicians, working in conjunction with unscrupulous landlords, tenaciously cling to the poll tax in order to keep the sharecroppers weak, humble and disorganized.

The United States Congress should act at once to lift this antiquated curse off the backs of the sharecroppers by amending the Hatch Act to prohibit the collection of poll taxes as a prerequisite to voting. State Legislatures are beneficiaries of the poll tax, and cannot be expected to destroy their main line of defense against the people.

Only one-fourth of the people in Virginia of voting age will vote in November; nevertheless, Senators Byrd and Glass are busy saving democracy in Finland.

Highway Funds And Welfare Needs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am greatly disturbed by your editorial in The Post of March 6 entitled, "First Things Last." I have felt that the editorial policy of The Post was along liberal and enlightened lines of thinking and I am pained to learn that you suggest diversion to other uses of taxes levied on motorists for a specific purpose—that of street and highway improvement.

It is said that motorists constitute the most heavily taxed group in the United States and it is easy to credit this statement when it is learned that they paid a tax bill of well over a billion dollars in 1939 for the privilege of using the inadequate highway facilities provided with only a part of the money they contributed.

Many states now pile all the gasoline and other taxes on motorists that the traffic will bear, such taxes being easy to collect, and use the money for purposes which have no connection with that for which they were levied. I believe this to be unfair.

Nationally motorists now pay a minimum tax of 1 cent a gallon on gasoline, as well as taxes on oil, tires, new cars and other products used by motorists. A part of the money so collected from District motorist was returned in the form of the $657,000 you mentioned as the Federal appropriation for District highway construction. It seems fair to me that this money which was collected from motorists for use in highway construction should be used for that purpose.

Your editorial gives the impression that this sum was a gift from the Federal Government. Actually, it constitutes a return of some of the money collected from motorists in the District. I must take exception to the statement that, "The result is to give Washington a more than ample program of street and bridge improvement ..." Considering the amount of traffic Washington streets have to carry, provisions for expeditious movement of this traffic are conspicous by their absence.

Many desirable improvements in highway facilities might be made—for instance: a subway system in the downtown area, some provision by the District for parking the many cars which should be accommodated in the downtown area while their owners are at work, another bridge across the Potomac to relieve the congestion on the existing structures, better streets in Southwest, an express highway for through traffic from the Baltimore-Washington highway to the South, an express highway from the downtown area to the Bethesda area to accommodate suburban residents and the many tourists who use Route 240, to mention a few.

I believe some of these projects will become necessary in the near future and they are desirable now. However, there are insufficient funds now to do these things and if diversion became the policy they would become impossible of fulfillment.

I am heartily in agreement with the thesis that the schools and other institutions in the District are suffering from lack of funds. The fault and the solution lie with Congress which refuses to make adequate appropriations for the support of District institutions and functions. As has been pointed out many times, most of the District budget items are larger than they would be if Washington were not the Capital of the United States. For this reason, as well as the fact that much of the property in the District is not subject to tax, the Federal Government should rightfully assume a much larger share of District expenses than has been the case in recent years.

Kindler Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As constant attendants of the Richmond concerts given by the National Symphony under Hans Kindler, we were annoyed by a letter in The Post of March 5, signed by a Mrs. Harry Raymond. In this letter Mrs. Raymond claims that the National Symphony has outgrown Dr. Kindler and that musicians are not money-grabbers, thereby purporting that in the present controversy concerning the continuation of the National Symphony Orchestra, it is the musical issue and not the financial one which it at stake.

If that be so, may we be allowed to congratulate the board of directors of the orchestra as well as the musicians on the solution of their problem? For surely none but a deaf person could be of Mrs. Raymond's opinion anent Dr. Kindler's capability as a conductor. We from out of town certainly would not attend the Richmond concerts of the National Symphony Orchestra if it were not for Kindler's inspiring rendition of both classic and modern works. It is this inspiration and this inspiration alone which makes the concerts of an otherwise second class orchestra (as compared to Boston, New York or Philadelphia) an artistic experience of the finest kind.

DAVID M. COOPER.
Hampton, Va., March 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with keen interest that I read Mrs. Raymond's article in The Post on March 5.

I have been a member of the orchestra for several years, and I can truthfully say that the sentiments of the majority of the men are identical with her's.

Unfortunately, none of us can express his opinion on the matter, at least not individually, because if he does, he will not be back at his job next year.

I venture to say that if a secret ballot were to be put to the orchestra, to determine whether they would play for the same salary, but under a different conductor, the majority would vote in the affirmative.

As Mrs. Raymond so aptly stated in her article, there are many first rate conductors without permanent orchestra, who would no doubt feel privileged to have a permanent orchestra in the Nation's Capital. I feel sure that the results of a first-rate conductor would be manifest in a very short time.

I only regret that I cannot sign my name to this letter, for if my name were made public, I would be minus a job next year, and since I have dependents, I cannot afford openly to express my opinion, which, unfortunately is a situation that exists in the orchestra.

I hope that in the near future we may have someone at our helm whom we can respect, both musically and personally, and if that day comes, I feel sure that Washington will have a first-rate orchestra.

SYMPHONY MEMBER.
Washington, March 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was so sorry and indignant at reading the letter Mrs. Raymond wrote in your paper concerning the difficulties of our orchestra and the lack of musicianship of Dr. Kindler and that the orchestra had outgrown the conductor. If that is the case, it all goes back to the careful and splendid training he has given them in these past years.

I have watched him grow ever since his first public appearance here as young artist in the Friday Morning Music Club when it met in the Raleigh Hotel. He has grown ever since and in my and many other opinions he has grown into an inspired and finished musician and conductor, and those men in the orchestra should consider it a privilege in every way to play under his baton.

Let us hope and pray that the present troubles may be smoothed out and that we go on having our orchestra with Dr. Kindler as its conductor. MARY BRICKENSTEIN

The Post Impressionist

A Block From Home

You came out of the grocery store with your arms full of bundles, and it was colder than hell and you hurried along the snow-covered sidewalk to the warmth and slippers of your own apartment.

"Boss . . ."

You crossed the street, damning a speeding taxi that nearly sliced off your rear and turned up Nineteenth, thankful you were only a block from home.

"Boss . . ." He was following you, running to get in front of you. "Boss, could you give me sump'n to eat . . ."

You hardly looked at him. Your face ached and your feet were cold despite your eight-fifty shoes and your rubbers. Your arms were full and even if you could reach in your pocket you had exactly four pennies and a street car token. The rest had gone for steak, lettuce, roquefort, potatoes, mushrooms, eggs and bread. This was one night you would have a feed.

"Honest to Gawd, Boss . . . I ain't et today." He was standing there in front of you and you had to stop or walk over him. A thin, middle-aged black man with a row of decayed teeth and one big gold one.

"Sorry," you said. "Don't have a cent" And walked on. At the middle of the block you stopped and looked back. Probably drunk, you said, and walked on again, but not so fast as before.

You heard him running then and someone behind him. You said, "Oh, hell," and stopped and blamed your stupidity for looking back.

"I don't have any money," you said, "but if you'll come along I'll give you something to eat."

And the little man wiped a dirt-crusted hand across his dripping nose and you saw his gold tooth again. "Thank Gawd, Boss." And then, "Can I ask my friend along?"

And you saw the other man lumbering behind him, huge, round-faced, moronic. You cursed yourself under your breath, your warm, pleasant evening already spoiled, and you said, "Give 'em an inch and they'll take a mile."

The giant black man didn't say a word, and he straggled along behind you and the little man as you walked the rest of the block. You wondered if you weren't inviting trouble, maybe a lot of trouble, and you worried about that $20 bill you had saved out of your pay check and left in the dresser bureau.

And when the little man offered to carry your bundles you gave him a surly "No," and even thought you'd better tell them both to run along and do their bumming off some other sucker.

But you stopped in front of your apartment house and you looked at them again and you saw the big Negro shivering through his overalls. And you said, "Well, I got myself in for it," and took them on in.

Your dog met you at the door with her tail wagging, and then starting barking. You said, "Quiet, Wallis," and Wallis went up to the two intruders and sniffed at their dirty cracked shoes, and her tail started wagging again, and the big man leaned over and started to pet her. You were going to say, "Never mind that," when you looked at his hands. But then you looked at his face and you didn't.

Instead you said, "Sit down." And you went out in the kitchen and fried four eggs instead of two and slapped them between slices of bread, and put in an extra slice of butter, and then decided to make some coffee.

When you went back in the living room they were sitting on the edge of the couch. They ate one sandwich apiece in big gulps. Then they sucked up the coffee.

"If you got work, we'll do it," the little man said. "We'll do anything you say, boss." Your poured them some more coffee, and they started on the other sandwiches.

The big man with the dazed watery eyes didn't say a word, but the little man said he was from North Carolina and he was going back there as soon as he could get there and he was going to take the big man with him. "He come over from Baltimore on the freight with me," he said.

They finished the last crumb of bread and the coffee, and the little man smacked his lips and stood up and rubbed his stomach, and said, "Boss, that was wunnerful It was sho' good." And then the big man nodded his head, and stood up and fumbled at a grimy cap.

The little man thanked you again at the door said, "Good luck, boss. Good luck to you. You been awful nice to us," and backed through the door.

The big man was trying to speak. He opened his enormous mouth and there were specks of bread between his gray teeth, and he fumbled at his overalls, and the water in his red eyes welled up.

You thought for an instant how funny it would be to see a giant black man like him cry. But then the water welled over in his eyes and leaked down the sides of his huge flat nose, and he stuck out his great hand and you found yourself shaking it, and then they were gone. And it didn't seem funny at all.

Census "Inquisition"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Roosevelt Inquisition Census shocks and terrifies the American people because in 1932—less than a decade since the last census—Roosevelt and the other "personal dry" crusaders against prohibition swept into power on a platform of "Personal Liberty," "Privacy of the Home," and "Constitutional Rights." Did any law enforcement officer under prohibition ever invade any lawful American home with such insolent disregard of personal liberty as the Roosevelt snoopers are now empowered to use?

These snoopers are, like President Roosevelt, called "public servants."

Reporter On Trial

By Mark J. Ginsbourg

Japan and "Jimmy" Young

BEHIND barred doors, a Japanese court yesterday morning began the trial of James Russell Young, I. N. S. correspondent in Tokyo, on charges of spreading "slanderous" reports regarding Nippon's forces in China.

The trial climaxes 50 days of detention and ceaseless questioning, during which the American newspaperman was only occasionally permitted to see either his wife or United States diplomatic officials in Tokyo.

Reports received here from the Orient indicate that the main reason for Mr. Young's arrest was his disclosure in speeches in Tokyo of the excesses committed by the Japanese soldiery in the "occupied" territory.

In talks delivered before the Tokyo American Club and other important gatherings, Mr. Young has not only described the destruction left in its wake by the Japanese war machine, but has also hinted at the failure of Nippon's "holy crusade" in China.

Speeches of this nature are naturally tabooed in Japan, and as soon as news of Mr. Young's talks reached the ears of Tokyo police his scheduled address before the all-important Japan Economic Federation was hastily canceled and he himself was put under arrest.

Mr. Young's apartment in Tokyo's American-built Imperial Hotel was searched twice, the police decamping with armfuls of various documents, photographs, private letters and copies of the correspondent's reports to his agency.

Reports from the Far East hinted that among the seized documents were letters from Chinese political leaders brought to Mr. Young the day before his arrest by American passengers aboard the S. S. President Coolidge. The letters reportedly contained documentary proof of certain facts reflecting adversely upon the Japanese military activities in China.

MR. YOUNG was arrested a fortnight after his return from an extensive trip to the Asiatic mainland, during which he traveled from Shanghai to Chungking, through Hongkong, French Indo-China and Kunming, and, later, from Shanghai to the puppet state of Manchukuo, through the Japanese-occupied areas in North China.

Mr. Young's enthusiastic reports of the conditions in "Free China," it is said, made him a marked man in the eyes of the Japanese gendarmerie. Suspicions of Mr. Young's "betrayal" were later confirmed by his uncomplimentary comments on Nippon's war in China.

Mr. Young is known as one of the outstanding foreign newspapermen in Japan, where he has lived for the past 13 years. Born in Springfield, Ill., Mr. Young comes from an outstanding journalistic family. He is a nephew of Mr. Paul Patterson, publisher of the Baltimore Sun, and is related to the Scripps family.

On his graduation from Johns Hopkins University in 1925, Mr. Young worked on a number of newspapers, including the Baltimore Sun. When news of nationalist revolution in China broke into headlines in this country in 1927, he dropped his work and signed on a German freighter bound for Shanghai.

Stopping over in Tokyo, he visited the offices of the Japan Advertiser, then regarded as the best English-language newspaper in the Orient, and was hired as a reporter. Two years later, he became the business manager of the daily, a post he held for the following ten years.

While working for the Advertiser, Mr. Young was appointed correspondent for the International News Service and King Features Syndicate. William Randolph Hearst's editorial policies at the time were regarded by the Japanese government as unfriendly, but with his cheerful smile and a talent for making friends, "Jimmy" Young managed to weather the storm.

Last year, Mr. Young severed his connections with the Advertiser and devoted his time exclusively to I. N. S. work. On a visit made to the United States early last year, Mr. Young delivered more than 100 talks, which, while fairly urging the maintenance of the American flag in the Far East, could not have been in any manner interpreted as antagonistic to Japan.

THE ARREST of "Jimmy" Young is described in foreign reports from Tokyo as especially significant because of his close friendship with Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, who has made every effort to secure Mr. Young's release. Mr. Grew's solicitude for his friend, a report said, went to the extent of a loan of his old fur coat to keep Mr. Young warm in his unheated cell.

Mr. Grew made himself very unpopular with the Japanese army last October by delivering a stern warning to cease the violation of American rights in China. Mr. Young's arrest is alleged to have been Japan's way of getting even with the American Ambassador.

Mr. Young is the third foreigner to run into difficulties with the Japanese military on similar charges. In the spring of 1936, Mr. Gerald Samson, a British newspaperman, was briefly detained and later deported to Shanghai on charges of "slandering" the Japanese army in private comments on the military mutiny of February 26, 1936.

Late last year the Rev. Luther Tucker, American missionary in China, was arrested on a visit to Japan, charged with activities prejudicial to the Japanese army, and on December 16 sentenced to four months of imprisonment. The sentence was suspended for a year and he was deported to Shanghai.

If the court finds Mr. Young guilty of violating the military code dealing with the dissemination of "fabrications and rumors concerning military affairs in time of war or emergency," he may be imprisoned for a term not exceeding three years.

Books And Things

Kay Boyle's Stories

IN HER new collection of short novels or long short stories, "The Crazy Hunter" (Harcourt, Brace, $2.50), Kay Boyle's scrupulous and sensitive talent is characteristically displayed.

She writes as she has always written with an admirable technical accomplishment and an unerring eye for pain; her style is as bright as an icicle and light as the bones of a bird. Its defect is that one never stops for a moment being conscious of it—one is apt to think of the brilliant adroitness of the performance rather than of the reality of the people in the stories. But that is not always so, and in "The Crazy Hunter," the longest tale in the book, her gift is seen at its best. The blind, stag-faced gelding, bought by Candy Lombe, half in tipsy protest at his own defeat by life, becomes to his daughter, Nancy, and, in the end, to himself, a symbol of the outcast and the humble ground down by the able and the strong. In the end he is saved from the huntsman's pistol, and we may be glad for that much—Miss Boyle doesn't allow us a rescue very often.

"Big Fiddle," the bass-viol player in the last story, so horribly caught in the net of his own past, is not allowed a rescue, though Miss Boyle seems to say that he thought he was innocent at heart. "Big Fiddle" is a murder story, but the horror in it is intellectual, not physical—the horror of tormented man, alone against the world.

The middle and shortest story, "The Bridegroom's Body," is the weakest of the three. Fine spun, even for Miss Boyle, the tale of the Glouries and their swannery reads in places almost like a self-parody. There is the brilliant description, the ominous implications, the sharp and nervous pain. But the motives of the characters, and even their actions, are so intellectually involved that it is extremely difficult to make sense out of any of them. There has been no fusion of the material, and the reader isn't willing to believe that that was the way things happened.

Nevertheless, for the first story and the last, the book should be read by any one who is interested in style. It shows both Miss Boyle's strength and her weaknesses. She has enormous sensitivity, great brilliance and beautiful precision of attack. If she only didn't make us quite so conscious of the way in which she hits the keys!

Hagerstown Forward Tops Valley Scorers

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, March 11.—Barnhart, forward of the Hagerstown High School basketball team, led the Cumberland Valley Athletic League in points scored, with 61 during the season just closed. Don Edmunds, Martinsburg, was second with 47; Rice, Fort Hill, of Cumberland, third with 40, and Flick, Martinsburg, fourth with 38 points.

Roosevelt and Farley

By Mark Sullivan

Pythias Without Damon?

In that account by Mr. Ernest K. Lindley in The Washington Post of a conversation between President Roosevelt and a visiting Congressman, the following passage dealt with Mr. James A. Farley. Though Mr. Roosevelt has smilingly avoided either confirming or denying the account, practically everybody accepts it as substantially accurate. The reader should understand that while the account is in the form of dialogue, it does not purport to be a literal reproduction of the words spoken, but merely a summary of the conversation:

"Visitor—You didn't mention Jim Farley, Mr. President. What about him for Vice President with Cordell Hull?

"Mr. Roosevelt—You know how fond I am of Jim Farley. He's a wonderful fellow. He's done a great job for the Democratic Party. I don't know of anyone more deserving of recognition by the party. And he's done more for me politically than any other living person, not even excepting my wife. But—I've been traveling about and talking to people from all over this country for a good many years now. You know what a lot of people down your way [in the South] would think and say if we nominated Jim for Vice President. I know, too, because I've lived among them. They'd say we were using Cordell Hull as a stalking horse for the Pope . . . And lots of other people in other parts of the country would say the same thing. I'm afraid we'd stir up a lot of prejudices and emotions that would confuse the whole picture. We might even end up with another Al Smith debacle."

DISMISS at once any notion that Mr. Roosevelt has religious prejudice—he has never shown the faintest sign of it; he has frequently shown the lack of it. There is drama in this situation, drama as elevated as ever happens in politics, but it is wholly a drama of personal relations.

Mr. Farley served Mr. Roosevelt well, served him more than any other human being—Mr. Roosevelt says so. Yet Mr. Roosevelt now puts a veto on Mr. Farley's advancement. Why?

We need spend little time on the suggestion, made by Mr. Roosevelt himself, that he denies his friend for the sake of the Democratic Party's interests. That is the sort of explanation we all devise sometimes, with which we often convince ourselves—when we are doing something for which the real motive is one to which we are blind, or reluctant to admit even to ourselves. For the Democratic Party, Mr. Roosevelt rather flagrantly lacks concern. If Mr. Roosevelt were anxious about his party's fortunes, he would not be subjecting it to semi-paralysis, and its leaders to desperation, by suspense about himself—a condition which Mr. Roosevelt could and by simply saying either that he is a candidate, or that he is not. And if Mr. Roosevelt were consulting the interests of his party, he would end, or would not have permitted to arise, the cleavage between the party's highest two figures, himself and Vice President Garner—another political drama as sensational as any America has ever seen. No, care for the Democratic Party is not a sufficient explanation of Mr. Roosevelt's attitude toward Mr. Farley.

HERE ARE two friends, who have been long together, who have traveled the road shoulder to shoulder, have risen high together, though always in the relation of Mr. Roosevelt as chief, Mr. Farley as liege. And now one of the two, Mr. Farley, is subjected to injustice by persons who say he should not be nominated for Vice President, because of his religion. In ordinary friendships, when one of the two is subjected to injustice, the other rushes to his defense—Damon gallantly makes defense of Pythias the chief concern of his being. In ordinary friendships, the attitude of the one in Mr. Roosevelt's present role would say, "Just because that has been said against my friend, I now insist that he be the Vice Presidential nominee regardless of any other consideration." Something like that was what Andrew Jackson did in similar circumstances.

Mr. Roosevelt would do it, too, if Mr. Farley's relation to him were still as it has been, if Mr. Farley were still a subordinate. Toward subordinates, Mr. Roosevelt is loyal, often goes to extreme lengths to protect them. But Mr. Farley's tragedy lies in his rise to a height where, while still a subordinate, he is also close to being a principal in his own right. He is like one who, starting as an office boy, rises to where his merit entitles him to being a partner, perhaps, later on, head of the firm. Mr. Farley, in political organization, is moving toward equality with Mr. Roosevelt. Chieftainship in the party is just ahead of Mr. Farley; in favoring circumstances he can move on to it. While Mr. Roosevelt, already chief, can go no higher.

AND MR. ROOSEVELT is of that temperament that does not easily brook an equal; he has the trait which bridles, has a spirit of challenge, toward any one else of regal rank. It was this trait that caused the touch of personal animus in his fight against the Supreme Court—the court, in our government of equal powers, had, to Mr. Roosevelt, the status of a rival. It was the same about the Senators who defeated the court plan, and whom Mr. Roosevelt therefore tried to purge.

There is this, too. If Mr. Farley were the Vice Presidential nominee, Mr. Roosevelt could not be the Presidential nominee, because the two come from the same State. And Mr. Roosevelt, consciously or obscurely, may wish to hold open every chance of his being the Presidential nominee.

Harry Tate

Dear Hi—A few miles down the Old Post road from Poli's Bijou—and more than a few years ago—Mr. Proctor built a new and shiny theater for the two-a-day in Mount Vernon.

And what were those sharp, staccato explosions that soon rang out from the direction of the stage? And what was it that caused those gales of laughter that made the outer walls shake and shiver? And why could I hardly wait 'til 8 o'clock of a certain night for dad to take me inside to see a fellow who was the funniest chap in the English music halls? The billing read "Tate's Motoring."

Don't you remember his entrance in the battered old car—his long linen duster—his "goggles"—gauntlets—and rakish motor cap—and the final loud backfire that rang out with perfect timing after the first wave of laughter had swept the house?

Bob Walsh.

Harry Tate's first big hit with his sketch "Motoring." It was followed, says the London Times, by "Fishing," "Flying," "Golfing," "Billiards," and "Wireless." The Times continues: "Tate on the stage was a red-faced man, usually in a loud check suit, gaudy waistcoat and gaiters. The finishing touch was a large cigar-shaped mustache with waxed ends, which see-sawed violently as he talked. He worked with a company of odd-looking assistants: a stolid, red-nosed man with a masterly expression of stupidity, a tall, gawky youth with a cracked voice and a squash-featured imp of a boy who subjected him to a series of exasperations. Harry Tate was the embodiment of the ordinary man struggling with irritations beyond his control."

Reading this, we seem back in Poli's Bijou Theater in Church street next to Tom Sullivan's Oneco Hotel, watching one of the greatest of all vaudeville comedians all over again.

"Yes, We, The People"

By Merlo J. Pusey

An Intelligent Study

THE STRENGTH of democracy lies in active participation of the people in public affairs. Government by the people presupposes a high degree of education among the rank and file as well as a keen interest in the problems of the Nation, the State and the community. So it is always stimulating to find groups of citizens earnestly and intelligently grappling with public issues.

An excellent example of how public opinion in a free country may be guided and sustained is given in the volume entitled "Government—The Citizens' Business" published by the University of Denver. The book records the proceedings of the Citizens' Conference on Government Management at Estes Park last June. But it is not a dull record. It is a stimulating discussion of a great variety of governmental issues with which every alert American is concerned.

For the most part the discussion cuts under immediate problems to basic principles. Less interest is manifested in patching up specific agencies that are failing in their public responsibilities than in general reorganization of governments in the interests of better public service and economy. One point emphasized, for instance, is the excessive number of American governments — some 175,000 of them. And this leads to suggestions that local government be consolidated and simplified, and that counties frequently be eliminated to avoid the cost of duplicate service.

Among the other subjects explored are financial management and control government in social security and relief, citizen groups in government and means of expediting economic recovery. In each instance, thoughtful papers by experts are presented and well-balanced conclusions are drawn.

THE DISCUSSION of "Government Income and Outgo" is especially penetrating. Instead of merely lamenting the rise in public debts, this group explores the meaning and significance of our new burden of debt.

One commentator directs attention to the fact that, if the Government had paid all its bills in 1938, nearly 30 per cent of all the incomes of all the people of the country would have had to be collected in the form of taxes. Even though large sums were borrowed to prevent a rise in taxes, levies were sufficiently heavy to discourage many enterprises which pump-priming was supposed to stimulate.

What, then, has been the net effect of pump-priming during the last six years?

Orville A. Weller offers a chart showing the increase in national debts since 1929. At the top are France, Denmark, Norway and Estonia—all with debt gains of less than 100 per cent. At the bottom are Germany and the United States, with debt increases of 195 and 219 per cent, respectively. In other words, we have increased our national debt more drastically than any other nation in the world.

A second chart by Mr. Weller shows what has happened to industrial production in the various countries since 1929. Latvia and Japan are at the top of the list. In both cases their industrial production in 1938 was more than 170 per cent of their output in 1929. Here again the United States is at the bottom of the list, with its industrial production only 72 per cent of the 1929 volume. From this record we appear to have spent the most borrowed money and to have made the least progress toward recovery.

BUT THE CONFERENCE was not content to examine only the economic repercussions of public spending and accumulation of debt. It also gave thought to the "significance of debt in a democracy." With a good deal of insight, the participants grappled with the question of whether a free people will be able to resist the temptation to defer paying their debts until catastrophe is upon them.

Mr. Weller contributed this thought:

"We must realize that in a country such as ours debt is not merely an economic problem—it is rather, and almost completely, political . . .

"The one great weakness of democracy was yet to be learned. This is not lack of intelligence or inordinate personal ambition. It is rather the unheeded and unchecked growth of the one thing that a self-governed people cannot face effectively—debt.

"A democracy has to punish itself to pay its obligations. It is this fact which makes extravagent and unwise spending a great menace to a self-governing people. Moreover, it is easier for any party in power to borrow than to raise taxes. It is this ease of incurring debt and difficulty of paying it off which makes debt a peculiar menace to a democracy."

VIRGIL JORDAN, president of the National Industrial Conference Board, noted that during the last decade Government has spent an average of $4,500,000,000 annually more than in the preceding ten years, but the annual national dollar income has averaged about $10,000,000,000 less.

It cannot be said that these discussions point the way to certain prosperity and preservation of the democratic way of life. But they at least illustrate a salutary disposition on the part of citizen groups to grapple with the stupendous issues which the upheavals of recent years have brought to the fore. In a country where the people rule complex problems are seldom disposed of by decisive action or by dramatic shifts of policy. The greatest bulwark of such a system is intelligent public opinion mobilized to stir lethargic regimes into action or to check the excesses of other regimes that mistake reckless activity for progress.

Before Canada Votes

The Campaign Warms Up

Ottawa.

THE TEMPO of the campaign in the Canadian general election is now beginning to rise as polling day, which is now less than three weeks distant, draws near. The voters are showing more interest in the issues before them, but less than in most previous contests.

There have now been nominated for the 245 seats about 570 candidates and by nomination day on March 11 the 600 figure will be passed with the result that there will be three or four-cornered fights in the majority of the seats.

The Liberals are trying to confine the issue of the election to one question: Which is the party capable of organizing the national war effort with the greatest efficiency and the minimum of internal discord? In a speech which he delivered in Winnipeg last week, Premier King brushed aside all other issues as irrelevant. But for the Conservatives, their leader, Dr. Manion, while insisting that the national ministry which he proposes will handle the war program much better than the partisan ministry now installed at Ottawa, has been trying to broaden the basis of the campaign by discussing current domestic problems and propounding solutions for them.

DR. R. J. MANION

The two Leftist parties, the Canadian Commonwealth Federation and the New Democracy, are also advocating their respective programs of economic reform.

THE GREAT battleground of the campaign is the central province of Ontario which contributes 82 seats out 245 seats in the federal parliament. It has Conservative traditions, but the Liberals carried 53 of its seats in 1935 and are now trying to defend them against a vigorous Conservative assault.

They are claiming that the government's record in organizing an effective contribution to the Allied cause entitles it to a new mandate, but the Conservatives will not accept this thesis and are arguing that the ministry has been guilty of many sins of omission and commission, and they are also appealing to the imperialist sentiment which is strong in the province. In the industrial areas they are attacking the government for lowering tariffs and in the country districts they are fanning dissatisfaction among the farmers with the workings of the bacon agreement concluded with the British government. They are getting some backing from the Toronto Globe and Mail, which favors Dr. Manion's scheme for a national ministry, but it shows some reservations in its support. And Mr. Mitchell Hepburn, the Liberal premier of Ontario, whose vote of censure upon the King ministry's war program was responsible for sudden dissolution, although he has made no speeches for Dr. Manion, is doing his best to make trouble for his former friends at Ottawa.

He has lately provoked a storm by charging that dissatisfaction with condtions at a training school of the Royal Canadian Air Force at his home town of St. Thomas, Ontario, was responsible for a riotous disturbance staged by the indignant trainees. The Nazis have been broadcasting his charges as evidence of trouble in Canada and Mr. Rogers, the minister of national defense, who denies Hepburn's accusations, has branded him as a traitor to the national interest. So a public inquiry which Mr. Hepburn will attend is to be held, and some dirty linen will doubtless be washed.

The Conservatives are now hoping that in the closing stages of the campaign Mr. Hepburn will go on the radio to denounce Premier King and his policies and they believe that such an attack coming from a prominent Liberal would turn a lot of votes. But Mr. Hepburn has given a free hand to his colleagues to take what line they liked and eight of his ministers and most of his followers are campaigning for the Liberal Party. At present the Liberals admit that they are bound to lose a number of seats in Ontario, but they think that they can keep their losses down to 20, which they will regard as satisfactory.

SOME indication of western sentiment will be available on March 21, five days before the federal election, when the voters of Alberta will cast their ballots at a provincial election, in which the social credit ministry of Premier Aberhart is seeking a new mandate.

It is appealing for it on the strength of its record as a rescuer of the toiling farmers and urban workers from the tyrannous oppressions of the banks and mortgage companies and is also promising that, as soon as some obstacles created by Ottawa have been removed, it will inaugurate the long delayed plan of social credit, for which everybody has been waiting for years.

The C. C. F., holding that there can be no effective reconstruction of the economic order without drastic measures of socialism will have no truck or trade with the New Democracy and are running their own candidates in the great majority of the western seats. They will get a substantial proportion of the vote of the Germans, the Ukrainians and other foreign-born groups but the splitting of the Leftist vote between two competing parties will help the chances of ministerial candidates, which would otherwise not be very good except in Manitoba.

The Liberals are fighting on the war program of the King ministry and are also claiming credit for lowering tariffs. The Conservatives, whose strength in the west has been waning for some years past, are fighting all the seats in Manitoba and British Columbia but are treating as hopeless many divisions in the other two western provinces and the Liberals are accusing them of secretly helping Leftist candidates in seats in which they are not contesting themselves.

QUEBEC is the great traditional Liberal fortress of Canada and the Liberal managers, now that a provincial ministry of their faith has been restored to control of the provincial administration, are confidently predicting that they will keep the 60 out of the 65 Quebec seats which they held in the last Parliament. They have considerable justification for their confidence as they have a well organized and well-oiled political machine and have also much better support from the French-Canadian press, while the two great English Conservative papers of Montreal, the Gazette and the Star, remain exceedingly cold toward Dr. Manion because they dislike some of his tendencies toward radicalism.

There is evidence of considerable dissension in the Liberal ranks, however. Apparently instructions had gone forth that a group of French-Canadian Liberal members, who voted against rearmament, were to be sternly disciplined and as a result a number of them failed to secure renomination. But most of these discarded isolationists are now running as Independent Liberals and their intervention may split the Liberal vote in a number of divisions and let Conservatives in. Dr. Manion, who is at present campaigning in Quebec, has one attraction for its voters in the shape of a French-Canadian wife who has been making speeches on his behalf but he has also to contend with a grave handicap in the existence of his book of reminiscences "Life Is an Adventure," in which he castigated the French-Canadians for their opposition to conscription in the last war.

The Conservatives who, despite their feeble organization, are fighting most of the Quebec seats, are not getting any help from former Premier Duplessis, whom they had expected to be a useful ally, and they do not seem likely to make any gains, unless the Roman Catholic hierarchy of the provinces decides to give them a helping hand. This contingency cannot be dismissed as impossible, because Cardinal Villeneuve, the Archbishop of Quebec, and his associates cannot feel easy in their minds over the prospect of having to report to Rome that a faithful son of the church like Dr. Manion was only able to secure a sprinkling of seats in the most devoutly Catholic community in the world. The cardinal lately manifested signs of distinct unfriendliness to the new Liberal ministry in Quebec for conferring the vote to women in the provincial field. If the hierachy exercises the powerful influence which it can wield at elections against the federal Liberal candidates, the Conservatives might easily gain a number of seats.

Demolition of structures, including apartment houses, in the Northwest rectangle where the projected $26,000,000 War Department building will rise, already is under way. Ruins of some three and four story structures near Twenty-first street, south of Virginia avenue northwest are shown here. Some morning in the near future late-sleeping residents of Foggy Bottom will leap from their beds when a series of detonations spell the doom of a ten-story apartment structure which will be razed with dynamite. First unit of the War Department Building to be constructed on this site will cost more than $5,000,000.

Washington Eludes Dire Motion Picture Abuses

An Outlander Exposes a Few 'Swindles;' 'Birth of a Nation' Enjoys Renaissance; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

"WASHINGTON is the motion picture man's Paradise."

It was Sid Lehman who was speaking. Mr. Lehman formerly was a United Artists operative in the Capital and now is in charge of that company's branch exchange in Buffalo, N. Y. He and his effervescent wife, Helen—owner of the most infectious laugh in America—weekended in town en route from the chilly end of Lake Erie to Miami for a spot of sunshine, sea beach and maybe Scotch.

BELL

"Films," Mr. Lehman was saying, "do not comprise the motion picture business in my territory. They are merely the thin camouflage for the conduct of a lot of very elegant little gambling hells. I mean, every night in the week there is some sort of money racket being conducted, with the screen plays as a transparent 'front'—banko, bingo, give-away dishes enough to serve the world, even if you smashed them all after every meal instead of washing them. Regardless of the merit of the screen fare prices on these nights frequently soar to $1 top. The entertainment has nothing to do with it. It is all based on the amount you stand a chance to win.

"There was the case of the woman about to be evicted from her apartment," Sid rambled on. "She took the last dollar she had in the world and bought a ticket to a 'bank night' and won $300—no kidding. And there is another angle to the swindle, too. In some of the spots, if you win $5 or more, you have to pay the person sitting immediately in front of you the price of his admission ticket. Those sitting on either side of you might be your relatives or friends. The guy or gal in front, you probably never saw before. So that's the picture business!"

Happily, nothing like that exists in Washington. The deservedly maligned "double-feature" bill is a mild abomination in comparison. So Sid and Helen have early taken the cinematic education of their small son in hand. Ask "Butch," aged 2½, to spell "exhibitor" and he pops it back at you promptly, with a smile almost as contagious as his mother's:

"D-O-G!"

Travel Department

When the Lehmans arrive in Miami—the lucky so-and-sos—they will find Esther Wheeler already there with her son and daughter, nicely convalescent from Washington's prevalent epidemic of the flu. Sam, Washington branch exchange manager for Twentieth Century-Fox, left Saturday to join them for an additional three weeks to make assurance of complete recovery doubly sure. Ray Bell, my theoretical father, now that he has made it a habit to be a top publicity man, should be in Hollywood by now to receive his latest award of merit. That high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, of Columbia, has turned down my proposition to switch roles next year—he to go to bed for three weeks while I take his place in the gay spots of the South. The rat!

"The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" travels fast. After a near-record week on the screen at the Earle, with Edward G. Robinson in the title role, this daring and widely discussed subject—dealing with a topic that long was taboo under a squeamish society's "conspiracy of silence"—quickly moves on now to the screen at the Metropolitan. It opens there tomorrow morning for a repeat engagement, with Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger, Mme. Maria Ouspenskaya and Donald Crisp leading the support.

"The Birth of A Nation" reopens its interrupted run at Henry Hiser's Hiser Theater in Bethesda, Md., today for four more days. It never should have come off. It only did because new prints are scarce and those available are booked all over the place, willy nilly. Mr. Hiser had to let his go and secure a new one all the way from the Coast to satisfy his public's demand for further showing of the David Wark Griffith epic of a quarter-century ago. Having seen a sound-dubbed print of this epochal film several years ago, I was doubtful about its present integrity. The sound track requires a speeded-up running pace—or did. Now, I understand, these mechanical difficulties have been so harmonized as to do justice to both action and audible commotions. "The Birth," after all these years, again is "cleaning up," as we say at the Harvard Club.

Hold-the-Left-High-and-Duck Note

Don't ask me whether "The Birth of A Nation" is better than "Gone With the Wind." I might break down and tell you!

FINANCE DEPT.: At the Hialeah racetrack, Joe Schenck, Leo Spitz and two other Hollywood executives sat in a box and greeted Herbert Bayard Swope, Jock Whitney, and William K. Vanderbilt, as they walked by . . . Damon Runyon, who occupied an adjoining box, watched these proceedings, and then said: "I'd hate to walk past those guys without a job."

TRAVEL DEPT.: James Cannon, the writer, met a Hawaiian Princess here last month. She returned to Honolulu, and has been urging Cannon to go there. . . 'You really should go,' a friend assured Cannon. "It's a beautiful place, and she has great social positions on the Islands. It would be a wonderful change for you, and you'll like living on the Islands" . . . "I'm not an Islands man," James confessed, "except for Staten and Coney."

SOCIAL NOTES: When William Saroyan's play opened, some of the reviewers criticized him because they thought they recognized Odets' influence in it. . . When Odets' "Night Music" opened, almost all the reviewers criticized it, because they thought they recognized Saroyan's influence in it . . Odets saw Saroyan at Sardi's, and greeted him; "H'ya, Cliff" . . . Saroyan acknowledged: "H'ya, Bill."

THEATER DEPT.: Saroyan has confidence in his new play, "Sweeney in The Trees" . . . "It's going to be great," he stated. "I've read it only once, but it's all right. When I read my play, I decided that I'd like it even if somebody else had written it—so I know it's all right."

MOVIES DEPT.: Paul de Kruif, author of "Microbe Hunters" and "The Fight for Life," has had many of his works plagiarized—some of them by authors who have sold their stories to Hollywood—but de Kruif never complained . . . His friends insist that now de Kruif who has written a great deal about Dr. Ehrlich and a Magic Bullet, will seek advice of counsel.

BOOK DEPT.: From page 162 of Sinclair Lewis' new novel, "Bethel Merriday:" . . . "nothing, beyond a note, in Leonard Lyons' column in the New York Post, that Andy, with his mother and Miss Joan Hinterwald, had been staying at a Great Neck chateau, and telling some very funny stories about summer theaters. Flushing as she lay there trying to sleep, Bethel hoped that none of the funny stories had been about her" . . . Well, Bethel needn't have flushed. All the funny summer-theater stories I've ever printed were about that distinguished actor, Sinclair Lewis.

LOCAL NEWS: Johnny Weissmuller will work at the Frisco Fair's Aquacade, with the specialty acts which were featured at the New York Aquacade last season . . . Harold Lloyd, who once was starred in the movie, "The Freshman," will produce the talkie version of that comedy. Ezra Stone will play the Freshman role . . . The Fairfield, Conn., firemen were unable to locate Roy Larsen of Life magazine. They wanted to tell him that a fire had broken out in his home, but that his family was safe . . .

ART DEPT.: Norman Krasna, the screen-writer who had been an officeboy for The World and the Evening Graphic, only a few years ago, startled some of his New York friends by telling them that he owns a painting by Sir Joshua Reynolds . . . "Why so surprised?" Kransa told them. "A Reynolds really doesn't cost very much. You can buy a Reynolds for only a little more than you'd pay for a Renoir."

In Hollywood

Hollywood, March 12.

In "Pride and Prejudice" all the gals are wearing tight corsets, and when Karen Morley was trying to eat lunch in the commissary, found she was laced up so tight she couldn't eat. One of the extras tried to "unhitch" her from the back, but finally had to get the waitress to come and help loosen Karen up a bit. Who said: "They were the good old days?" . . . Which reminds me, on that trek to Virginia City, they're rigging up the Crystal Bar in the train, with the Living Lily above it. You know she's the one with the rubber tummy that they had so much fun with at the World's Fair; but for the picture Will Hays made them put a bra on her—imagine! . . .

HOPPER

Now that "Dubarry was a Lady" is being sought by Universal as a picture for Mae West, the truth can be told—Buddy de Sylva, who wrote it, had Mae in mind. But you can bet your bottom dollar if they do get it for Mae, that's one script that won't be rewritteen.

Over at Hal Roach Studio they have a jiu jitsu expert, Miki Morata, to train John Hubbard for "Fur about," and in his spare moments, Miki has been teaching the extras the gentle Japanese art. Says Miki: "In three easy lessons I can teach any girl to protect herself from gun, knife or bad intentions." . . . Wow! . . .

I stopped in a little Kosher delicatessen store out near Metro for a cup of coffee, and eating there were most of the storm troopers from "The Mortal Storm." A couple of extras almost caused a riot on the set the other day because they refused to sing the Hymn of Hate, because they believe it's bad Americanism and has no place on the screen. I have a hunch there'll be lots of dissension before the picture is released.

Maxwell Anderson Again Probes Ills Of World in 'Key Largo,' at National

By Nelson B. Bell

Once again Mr. Maxwell Anderson is concerned with the psychological, ideological and cosmic mess in which the world finds itself.

In "Key Largo," disclosed for the first time in Washington upon the stage of the National Theater last night, as in "Winterset," "High Tor" and others of his deeply thoughtful and moving plays, Mr. Anderson discovers taut drama in the minds of those confronted with life's most difficult dilemmas. In "Key Largo," it is Paul Muni, returning to the stage after a long period of valued service in the celluloids, who is the protagonist of Mr. Anderson's gripping conflict between an earthy and intensely human realism and that shimmering and nebulous idealism of which heroes are made.

Beyond the measure of any other contemporary playwright, Maxwell Anderson possesses the power of fitting poetic speech to the tongues of characters who are anything but poetic. In his present work, as in those which already have been cited, he merges elements of drama that seem to have no right to blend into so engrossing and forceful a play as his present study of bewildered youth.

The play opens with a prologue on Hill No. 4, one of the ramparts of Loyalist Spain, in 1939. King McCloud, leader of a band of eight volunteers, now reduced to five, perceives no further practicability in fighting for a lost cause and alone deserts when his comrades refuse to surrender to his completely sane and logical arguments. A year later, McCloud presents himself at the wharfside home of Victor D'Alcala, on Florida's Key Largo, to explain why he alone remains alive of the little group that had set out under his leadership to fight for the world's ideals of the rights of man, justice and international amity.

It is here that Mr. Anderson, as is his wont, interjects the machinations of a gang of gambling hoodlums to point the major premise of his play. There is something of love in it, when McCloud meets the sister of one of his abandoned followers of Hill No. 4, and her father, blinded by his own service to a cause he deemed worth any sacrifice. The consequences of this strange alliance is wholly tragic. But they serve the author well.

Out of a character study that may seem to some contradictory, he has evolved dramatic developments that are unfailingly interesting, tense and melodramatically eloquent. If, in the final scene, King McCloud seems to have gone back on all that he had urged in self-defense in the earlier intervals of the action, his eventual surrender to circumstance and an inward prompting still may be set down as a logical and believable fulfillment of the purpose of a fine and fluent piece of writing.

Muni, in the role of King McCloud, is happily met with a role commensurate with his towering stature as an actor able to breathe life into even so idealized and poeticized character as King McCloud. There is about his portrayal that convincing and unencumbered naturalness that makes it something to be remembered and cherished in a day when flamboyance is too much honored. Mr. Muni's performance is totally naturalistic. It is as clean cut as a cameo, and as sharply etched on memory.

There are those in the cast who render him valiant support. Foremost among them I should nominate Joseph Pevney, as the real Victor D'Alcala; Ralph Theadore, as Sheriff Gash, the political pawn; Charles Ellis, as the blinded senior D'Alcala, whose impersonation grows in effectiveness as it goes along; Helen Beverley the Alegra D'Alcala, who does so much for the romantic movement of the story, and Frederic Tozere, as a bulky and sinister Murillo, chief of the gangsters.

There are many more who contribute to the rounded excellence of a cast that won repeated curtain calls last night. I counted seven. There could have been twice that number, had they not been cut short by some arbitrary backstage authority.

As you would your frocks! This is a Spring when lines are of major importance

CHOOSE YOUR CORSETS FROM LANSBURGH'S FAMED BRANDS. The array is so sweeping, the types so varied, that whatever your figure, you can be fitted with fashion and flattery. We've a brand new corset-consultant service to further help you—to solve any problems—to tell you what will look best under your new Easter fashions. Are you wondering what to wear with your longer torso suit; what goes with the narrower silhouette; what to get for a frock indented slightly from bosom to hips? We have the answers!

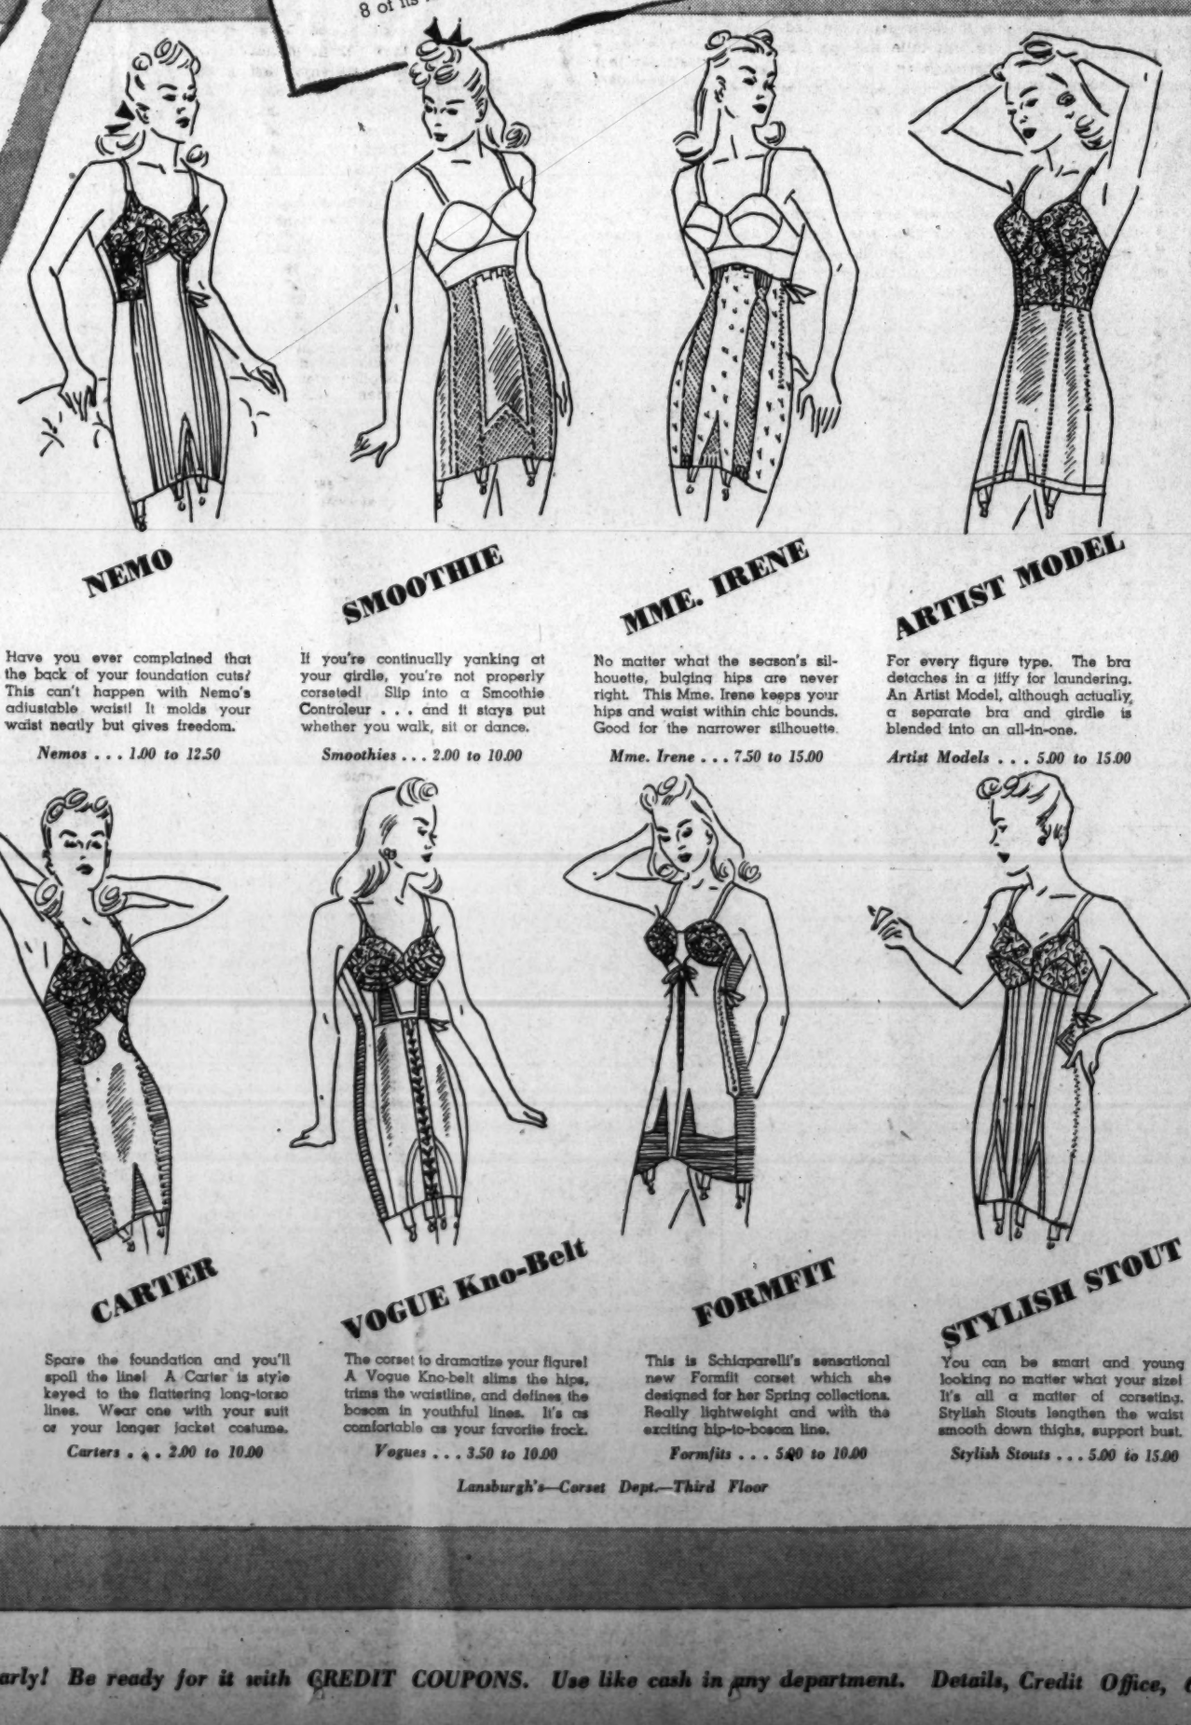
A Vogue Foundation to mold you to Spring's suave, longer silhouette. Rayon satin lastex and cotton lastex net 10.00

Hear JEAN ABBEY, Woman's Home Companion Radio Shopper, talk at our

CORSET FASHION SHOW

2:30 and 4:45 P. M.

Every corset will be shown on living models. This is an unexcelled opportunity to learn the important lines for Spring and what goes under them. Lansburgh's will have 8 of its famous brands on display in the show. We'll be seeing you on our Third Floor.



NEMO

Have you ever complained that the back of your foundation cuts? This can't happen with Nemo's adjustable waist! It molds your waist neatly but gives freedom.

Nemos . . . 1.00 to 12.50

SMOOTHIE

If you're continually yanking at your girdle, you're not properly corseted! Slip into a Smoothie Controleur . . . and it stays put whether you walk, sit or dance.

Smoothies . . . 2.00 to 10.00

MME. IRENE

No matter what the season's silhouette, bulging hips are never right. This Mme. Irene keeps your hips and waist within chic bounds. Good for the narrower silhouette.

Mme. Irene . . . 7.50 to 15.00

ARTIST MODEL

For every figure type. The bra detaches in a jiffy for laundering. An Artist Model, although actually a separate bra and girdle is blended into an all-in-one.

Artist Models . . . 5.00 to 15.00

CARTER

Spare the foundation and you'll spoil the line! A Carter is style keyed to the flattering long-torso lines. Wear one with your suit or your longer jacket costume.

Carters . . . 2.00 to 10.00

VOGUE Kno-Belt

The corset to dramatize your figure! A Vogue Kno-belt slims the hips, trims the waistline, and defines the bosom in youthful lines. It's as comfortable as your favorite frock.

Vogues . . . 3.50 to 10.00

FORMFIT

This is Schiaparelli's sensational new Formfit corset which she designed for her Spring collections. Really lightweight and with the exciting hip-to-bosom line.

Formfits . . . 5.00 to 10.00

STYLISH STOUT

You can be smart and young looking no matter what your size! It's all a matter of corseting. Stylish Stouts lengthen the waist smooth down thighs, support bust.

Not All Dance Places Show Cases for Those Alleged Celebrities

New York, March 11.

THERE are some very nice eat, drink and dance places here that are not show cases for alleged celebritics of the cafe society chain-gang and visitin'g Hollywood. I was reminded of this the other night when Hall and I went up to the Rainbow Grill, which is the modest sister of the Swanky Rainbow Room, 65 flights up in the RCA Building.

ALICE HUGHES

I got a real kick out of the Grill. Comparatively small and modestly decorated, the place doesn't demand dressing up. Just come as you are, fairly clean and neat. Above all, the crowd there seems to have its mind and feet completely on dancing. When the band strikes up, nearly all the tables are abandoned at once, and the fairly large floor is packed. And when the boy starts rattling the buckshot in the gourd and the rumba is on, it's some struggle to go through those athletics on such a crowded floor. But the kids try it, bless their hearts, and many a shin must be barked.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN — Fine goings-on here. We've had a terrific ice storm in these parts, and the other morning business took me to the Empire State Building. To my surprise Fifth avenue and Thirty-fourth street were roped off, and scores of beefy constables were keeping people out of the area. Huge chunks of ice were falling into the street, and coming from a thousand feet up would surely pulverize any pedestrian.

Grace Moore, the singer, is taking off a few pounds here and there. I saw her lunching in Rubenstein's diet restaurant, wearing a black wool suit with three rows of buttons on the short jacket. She also featured a white lingerie blouse, and on her blonde pate was a snug shirred skull cap. Very nice sight.

Ruffles Run Riot at Fashion Promenade

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

AMONG the pre-Easter style highlights noticed at yesterday's Connecticut Avenue Fashion Show were pleated, ruffled and petticoat flounced costumes. Every other hat, dress or dinner suit sported a flounce of pleated organdy, lace frilled pique or tucked lace. Peg-legged little sailors wore these flounces; a Scarlett O'Hara waltz gown was weighed down by them and even a parasol had scallops of ruffles around the edges.

Outstanding among the promenade fashions, roundly applauded by several thousand spectators during the three-a-day showings, was a bridal gown of wistful blue tulle, after Balenciaga's imaginative original Spanish bridal gown. It was speckled with silver stars and had a veil of blue tulle and apple blossoms harmonizing with a Spanish prayer book, which also bloomed with apple blossom sprays.

A rare platina fox brought enthusiastic response, too, in its version of a hip-length jacket. The most sophisticated color presented and one that seemed universally liked was "Swiss chocolate" done in silk print suits, in a jersey daytime frock and even in sleek evening costumes.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Deserted by Husband, Girl Finds Real Love; Then Husband Returns; How Be Fair to Both Men?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Nine years ago, when I was 18, I ran away and married a boy of 19, whom I had known most of my life. As I view it now, I never was in love with him. I didn't know then what love is. He is a most attractive and lovable person but never will grow up. He had 28 jobs or business ventures in eight years, and for the past two years has done nothing to support himself, as he has a small estate income. Our nomadic life was fun to me for a while, and we lived all over this country. For the past five years, I have supported myself entirely, as I am capable of earning a good salary.

Last year, like a bolt from the blue, he came in and announced that he was tired of seeing no one but me and was going to travel. He said he might be back in a month or it might be 10 years. He said if I found someone else, he would give me my freedom. I was not working at the time, but I got a job at once, in another city, and he went on his merry way.

In time, I did meet a man. I realized then that I had never before known what a man should be. This man was older than I, although I have gray hair and look at least 35. He is a fine sportsman, splendidly educated, compatible in all ways, able in business and respected in his community. He hd never married and knew my status from the start.

With characteristic fairness, he said if I were entirely finished with the past, he wanted to marry me; but that he was no poacher and knew my abhorrence for divorce and my devotion to duty (nd I do feel responsible for this irresponsible "child" of mine). He said he would not take me if I continued to "look back over my shoulder."

About this time my husband was hurt in an acident and hospitalized. I hated to hurt him further just then by telling him of my decision to divorce him, and so procrastinated until one night the door bell rang and there he stood. I gave him shelter for weeks, after telling him of my plans; but we had no intimacy. He immediately wanted me back when he learned that someone else wished to marry me.

What should I do, Miss Haworth? Is there happiness for any of us if I keep my vows and go back to this boy, whom I love only as I do my brother?

DISTRACTED.

In Taking His Loss, Husband May Gain

DEAR DISTRACTED: Look at the record. Your "child" blithely walked out on you a year ago, after hurling the thunderbolt that he was bored with your society and ready to free you for the asking. He did this, after having let you rustle your own provisions during the preceding five years. He left you jobless, obliged to support yourself in the future ("—for a month; 10 years; who knows?—"), without displaying one shred of solicitude for either your emotional or economic welfare.

In so doing, he repudiated his marriage vows, spiritually and literally; he broke the contract, and he left you to succumb to utter demoralization or to pick up the pieces and build again more securley, as you chose. You did an admirable thing in going bravely forward to find the substance of which he had been but the shadow. Having found real love as reward for courage, I cannot think that you would be doing justice to any person concerned if you were to decline that reward in order to give this cocksure, irresponsible young parasite a prodigal's welcome back to a quasi-"mother's" arms.

You say, "He will never grow up." I'm not so sure. Belated growth is sometimes forced by life itself, and the "forcing" process often sets in with the cataclysmic discovery that you can't eat your cake and have it, too; that you get in terms of what you give; that he who dances must pay the fiddler; that the profit or loss we take from life today is the net result of yesterday's effort and investment (or lack of same).

Don't let your sisterly affection for this charming no-account betray you into the mistake of keeping him a child forever, by giving him everything he persuasively pleads for; by making indulgent allowances for his irresponsible misbehavior on the grounds that "he's just a child; a lovable child." He's a man. Hold him accountable for his actions on that basis. Let him take his medicine like a man in this instance.

If the truth of his feelings could be known, you probably would discover that his current desire to renew the marriage is more willful than admirable. Give him all he asks and in less time than before he probably would be bored and surfeited and off again to further aimless adventures that excluded you. But give him to understand that you said "good-by" to him a year ago—with a finality which you did not then realize—and there is an even chance that he will begin, for the first time in his life, to analyze the fateful relationship between action and reaction, and that he will inaugurate a reform designed to spare himself future losses of comparable sort. And if this happens you will have made a far greater contribution to his welfare, in divorcing him, than you ever could make in taking him back from a sense of duty.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

The Gentler Sex

By MALVINA LINDSAY

Glamour at the Gavel

Mrs. DeGoofey

The resourceful president of the Do Something About It League announced at her press conference yesterday that she was undertaking a radical reform of the convention attire of club women.

"With the approach of the women's convention season," said Mrs. DeGoofey, "I feel that something must be done quickly to put women delegates more in the spotlight. It is most unfair that women should attend their state and national conventions looking like little brown hens, while their men convene and parade in all sorts of spectacular costumes.

"I ask you, why should men be permitted to steal the show by appearing in convention cities as sheiks, chieftains, Oriental potentates, Hussars, Cossacks, plumed knights, etc, while women appear in nothing more exciting than sequin jackets, badges and gardenias? I say it is high time that women delegates caused some stir in the hotel lobbies and downtown streets of strange cities, and I intend to see that they do so!"

Masquerade Effect For Conventions

"But Mrs. DeGoofey," asked a hotel reporter, "don't most women delegates already wear convention costumes?"

"What do you mean?"

"Well—like large flowered dresses, ribbons, corsages, fox scarfs, big handbags—etc?"

"Those do not distinguish women delegates sufficiently from other important women. Now I am planning some convention costumes that will really proclaim to the citizens of any convention city that the Daughters of Cleopatra or the Amalgamated Advancers, or other organized feminine legions have arrived, and that also will show spectators, just who is who in these organizations.

"For instance, I will have all national or state presidents of organizations dress as dashing drum majors. Each organization, of course, will work out its outfits for these and other officers in its own club colors, as gold and purple, scarlet and blue, and so on. The point is that anyone, seeing a woman on the street, in a hotel or other public place in an outfit of a drum major, will know instantly that she is a convention president, or chairman.

"Now as to first vice presidents. Since they lead such retiring lives I intend to have them dressed as veiled harem ladies. Then when they become presidents, they can the more enjoy their attention as drum majors. Second vice presidents will wear the garb of Spanish senoritas and carry guitars. Third vice presidents will be Geisha girls.

"What about the club secretaries?" asked a club editor. "Don't you think they deserve a break?"

"Indeed I do, and I am attiring all recording secertaries as Hula dancers so that they will get a little more public attention. Corresponding secretaries will be Oriental princesses weighted down with barbaric jewelry. By such a costume I hope to make this office more attractive to club women.

Club Treasurers As Mermaids

"Club treasurers, I feel, deserve special reward so I have worked out a very alluring mermaid's ensemble for them. Such a costume, I think, will take the curse off the job and remove from its holders the stigma of being 'dependable women.' Club auditors, who also have dull jobs, I am making into ante-bellum belles—Scarlett O'Haras if you please—for convention purposes. Sergeants at Arms will be South Sea Islanders and for all chairmen of committees I have designed a Joan of Arc armor."

"But won't the ordinary delegates get a chance to dress?" asked a cub reporter.

"Oh certainly. My plan is for each organization to choose the costume—masquerade if you wish—for its delegates, anything colorful and striking that will be effective in a parade. For instance, an organization could have all of its delegates come as Tyrolean peasants, or Greek goddesses or Barbados bathing girls, or even as Brownies Kewpies, Minnie Mouses, or rather Mice, or something imaginative and fantastic."

"I suppose your convention delegates will parade a great deal?" asked a "crowd story" reporter.

"They will spend most of their time parading. They will have bands and drum corps and groups of serenaders and really keep things lively."

"What kind of a convention costume will you wear," asked a fashion editor.

"My costume will of course be very conservative I am toying with a number of ideas. Just now ing as a woman of Bali—the place so many men travelers go?"

Your Figure, Madame

Choice of New Spring Suit Should Depend on Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

NO WOMAN likes mistakes in her wardrobe. She has to wear 'em! And a spring suit that was made for someone totally different in type is the costliest of all wardrobe calamities! So I have asked Sybil Coles, clothes counsel for one of the leading Fith avenue department stores, to give us all a few pointers that will make it harder to go wrong.

Figure A, the tall girl, looks well in the new long-jacket suits, but not the short, stocky girl. But B, the short girl, looks taller and slimmer when wearing a coat and dress outfit with up-and-down lines

Miss Coles does not believe in hard-and-fast rules in shopping for clothes—there are usually exceptions to the best rules. But, in order to find a suit that does everything it should for your appearance, your individual build and measurements must be taken into consideration. If your suit is a success, she says, you can practically live in it—and always feel well dressed!

Our counsel does not regard the new long-jacketed suits—the ones with jackets that strike the figure about midthigh—as ideal for the very small woman. Anyone who is both small and stocky should sheer away from this style. But, Miss Coles points out, some of the small, very slim women look extremely chic in these suits.

Skirt Length Emphasized

The rule men place their faith in, that of having the coat come to the palm of the hand, is based on the assumption that the wearer has long legs. It works out fine for women with long legs. Most women have comparatively short legs, however, and cannot afford to detract from the length of the skirt.

A suit is exacting and figure problems must be reckoned with. With large hips, a coat that stops right at this measurement serves to call attention to it. Nothing looks worse on the short, stocky figure than a hip-length coat of one color and a skirt of another! If Miss Coles had her way, the excessively overweight woman would stay away from the skirt and waist combination altogether —certainly she should if she has a thick midrift! Most flattering to the overweight is the coat and dress combination, particularly when designed to give a slimming effect. Taboos for the large woman include large, flagrant plaids and checks and shiny materials.

The single-breasted jacket is very slenderizing . . . but the girl with the narow chest must be careful about accentuating slenderness through this area, or she will look like Camille toward the last! For her, either the double-breasted jacket or one that gives the effect of shoulder width is best. The cut of the sleeves may add to or subtract from shoulder width. If the top of the sleeve is cut out, rather than in, it gives a much wider shoulder line.

Miss Coles suggests that you pay special attention to the fit of your suit collar. It should fit snugly in the back, not hike up and detract from the length of the neckline. The lapels should be narrow and the tot ' effect that of a fairly long neck and wide shoulders.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 PINTS A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Kidneys remove excess acids and poisonous waste from your blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Mrs. Thomas Dewey Charms D. C. on Visit

Wife of Presidential Candidate Avoids Political Questions, Discloses Keen Interest In Redecorating Home on Farm Near Pawling

By Hope Ridings Miller

ON HER FIRST VISIT here in some time, Mrs. Thomas E. Dewey was a center of much favorable attention the past week-end when she came from New York especially to attend the Press Club stunt party Saturday night. Her short stay ended Sunday morning when she caught an early train to New York, but even at that she remained several hours longer than she had planned. Her original schedule indicated a return home at midnight Saturday, but she remained overnight at the Willard Hotel to take in a follow-up party after the Press Club dinner.

HOPE R. MILLER

Although Mrs. Dewey is from my home town (Sherman, Tex.,—in case you've forgotten), I had never met her until she arrived at the party Saturday night. She looks much younger than her 37 years; is twice as pretty as her photographs; has a wide range of interests and an exceptional sense of humor. Furthermore, she is as clever as they come about neatly steering conversation away from any political import. Truth is, if you didn't know her husband had thrown his hat into the Presidential ring, you'd never guess a political thought ever entered her pretty head.

Most of her talk seemed to center around her two boys, her home and the farm she and her husband recently bought near Pawling, N. Y.

Right now, she is deep in plans for redecorating the house so that it will be all ready for occupancy by summer. She frankly admits that "fixing up a place like that" is a thrilling experience and that she is more than glad the place is situated in a remote spot where one can have peace and quiet—and plenty of both.

In a brief bit of table talk with her during the press club dinner, I learned that she has wanted many times to retutrn to Texas to live. "But I suppose it's just one of those dreams that may never come true, and might not live up to expectations, if it did," she said. As we talked on, she told me also that never for one minute had she ever wanted to go back on the stage since the day she left it. "You see, I got into that line of work because I thought I had a voice—not because I had any theatrical inclinations," she went on. "I still enjoy singing—but only for my family and friends, and not too often for them."

CAPITAL SKETCHBOOK: Prince Bertil of Sweden, who has been in Washington for several weeks and will be leaving on Saturday, was in a small group entertained at tea yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Cordell Hull. The popular wife of the Secretary of State always receives visiting foreign notables in her apartment some time during their Washington stay. Accompanying Prince Bertil yesterday afternoon were the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, and one or two members of His Royal Highness' staff . . . Herbert Sholz, German Consul General at Boston, and Frau Sholz will be in Washington this week-end to attend the reception Saturday in honor of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, who is head of the German Red Cross . . . Frau Sholz will be feted at a luncheon on Saturday at which Frau Witthoeft-Emden, wife of the German Naval Attache will be present . . . Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard will leave this week-end for Philadelphia, where they will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Stix Wasserman at their modernistic home, Square Shadows. Mr. Stoddard will talk before a meeting of the English Speaking Union of Philadelphia on Saturday. Mrs. Stoddard will return to Washington Monday but her husband will go on to Reading, Pa., where he will lecture Monday night. He will return to Washington Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Stoddard had as their guest at dinner last night, and at the A Capella Choir concert later, Luigi Villari, noted Italian writer, who is staying at the Hay-Adams House for several days. Mr. Villari and Mr. Stoddard are friends of long-standing.

Among smaller dinner parties given before last night's opening performance of "Key Largo" at the National Theater was the one at which Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Smith entertained at the Mayflower Hotel. In keeping with their custom, the Smiths gathered in their guests at 7 p. m., and then took them on later to their box at the theater. In the company were the Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Edward J. Noble, and Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Sturges.

WEEK-END MEMORIES: One of the gayer get-togethers on Sunday afternoon was the informal party given by Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard at her home in Alexandria. Arranged in honor of her house guest, Mrs. James Madison Blackwell (Betsy Talbot Blackwell, editor of Mademoiselle Magazine), the "at home" drew a number of interesting guests from Washington, Alexandria and points south.

Although she had hardly had time to get her bags unpacked—having just returned from a trip to Mexico City—Mrs. Dillard plunged into a round of entertaining that began Sunday morning and went on until late Sunday night, when Mrs. Blackwell boarded a plane to return home.

Miss McKay To Fly Here With Party

Miss Patricia Vandergrift McKay, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Douglas I. McKay, of Greentrees, Bronxville, N .Y., will arrive here Friday in the private plane of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Vance, of Wilmington, Del. Miss McKay is a cousin of George T. Summerlin, Chief of Protocol of the State Department, and Senora Mariano Zuberbuhler, the former Miss Margot Garrett, of Washington.

Accompanying Miss McKay, who has appeared in New York theatrical productions and in the movies, will be Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Hendrickson Dunn, jr., of Mount Kisco, and Miss Arlene Ringer, of Bronxville. The party will stay at the Hay-Adams.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz entertained at dinner last evening and will be hosts again tonight.

Mrs. Peter Norbeck, of South Dakota, widow of the Senator, and Mrs. George Norbeck, who are spending several months in Washington, will be guests of honor at a luncheon to be given tomorrow by their nieces, Mrs. Samuel H. Sabin and the Misses Myrtle and Edith Norbeck. The party will take place at Mrs. Sabin's residence, 4140 Lorcum lane, Arlington, Va.

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard, who had to cancel her engagements recently owing to illness, has recovered and will resume her talks on current events this morning at the Sulgrave Club.

Mr. and Mrs. John Allen Reed were hosts Saturday at their home in Chevy Chase, Md., in honor of Mr. and Mrs. C. Earle Lamson. Mr. Lamson, who has been local director of the District of Columbia Employment Center, is leaving to be personnel director of Bonneville Dam, Columbia River, and will live in Oregon.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Kronheimer have as their guest their daughter, Mrs. Alfred Goldsmith, of Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund L. Kaufmann, who have been in Hollywood, Fla., for several months, have returned to their home on Colorado avenue.

Mrs. J. G. Stahlman Guest at Luncheon, Of Mrs. Cottrell's

Mrs. James G. Stahlman, wife of the publisher of the Nashville Banner, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Jesse Cottrell in the latter's apartment at 2900 Connecticut avenue.

The company included Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, jr., who feted Mrs. Stahlman at a luncheon on Saturday at the Shoreham; Mrs. Estes Kefauver, Mrs. Albert Gore, Mrs. Warren E. Hunt, Miss Christine Sadler and Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris.

Mrs. Stahlman will leave today to return to Nashville.

Misses Howry To Be Hostesses

The Misses Mary and Elizabeth Howry will give a supper party Friday for John Rogers, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John Alexander Rogers, who is appearing in "St. Joan" here this week. Miss Mary Howry recently returned from a trip to New York and Saugatuck, Conn., where she visited Mr. and Mrs. William Phelps Eno.

Mrs. Hollister Sturges, who is visiting the Misses Howry, will return to New York the end of the week

Washingtonians See Flower Show

A number of Washingtonians are in New York this week to attend the International Flower Show at Grand Central Palace. Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stanley White left for New York yesterday. They expect to return Thursday or Friday.

Mrs. Robert Ash also has gone to attend the flower show. She will return the latter part of the week. Mrs. Ash is president of the Chevy Chase, Md., Garden Club.

The Fotitches To Entertain

The Minister of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch will entertain at a box party at tonight's joint performance of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and the National Symphony Orchestra. Their guests will include Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett, Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Murray and Mrs. Wainwright Abbott.

M. and Mme. Fotitch are particularly interested in the ballet tonight, as three of the stars, Mia Slavenska, Igor Youskevitch and Casimir Kokotch are compatriots.

Other socially prominent Washingtonians present will include Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, who will have Mr. and Mrs. John Rowland Hill in their box; Mr. and Mrs. Foster Adams, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, Dr. and Mrs. Hans Kindler, Mrs. Royal T. McKenna, Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Tobriner and Dr. and Mrs. Carl Voegtlin.

The dances tonight will include Foline's "Les Sylphides," "Rouge et Noir," the new abstract ballet with the Matisse decor, and "Gaite Parisienne."

Laurence Benets Leave for South

Mr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet will leave today by motor for a leisurely jaunt to New Orleans, St. Augustine and other interesting old cities. They will be gone about a month.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Benet will resume their Sunday afternoon "at homes," which are famous in Washington society.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

"PELL SUNDAY LUNCHEONS" are rapidly becoming a week-end institution. Last Sunday's luncheon at their home, Cornwell, was in honor of Robert Pell's father, Stephen Pell, of New York. The senior Mr. Pell is owner of the famous historic show place, Fort Ticonderoga, which he and the late Mrs. Pell restored and opened to the public. In the last war Stephen Pell joined a regiment of French chasseurs and was wounded in action, which accounts for several of his numerous decorations.

Other guests at the Pells on Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman Nickerson, of Long Island, week-end guests of the Pells; Miss Irene Boyle, social secretary to the British Ambassador; Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Jacques Truelle and Hugh Cumming, jr.

THE OTHER DAY at the Legation of Finland the luncheon guests were gathered in the drawing room. The counselor of the State Department, R. Walton Moore, was there, also Mrs. Arthur Woods, looking very fit after her recent stay in Arizona; Robert Cortessi, down from New York; Mrs. Emil Hurja, Miss Rebecca Wellington and several members of the staff of the legation.

After a little delay the Minister looked around the room and said, "We are waiting for the man with the money to come and pay for the groceries so we can have lunch."

At that moment the door swung open and Jesse Jones was announced, to be greeted with great warmth by host and hungry guests alike.

WEEK-END LUNCHEONS began on Friday with the dean of the Diplomatic Corps, the amiable Peruvian Ambassador, entertaining in honor of the newly-appointed United States Ambassador to Peru and Mrs. R. Henry Norweb. Mrs. Norweb wore handsome gold jewelry with her costume of hunter's green and a becoming little peaked hat. Among the guests were Mme. van Kaathoven, in cocoa brown; Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Ralph Hill and the Counselor of the Embassy and Mme Chavez.

The Ambassador presented each guest, men as well as ladies, with a gorgeous gardenia. One lady swiftly extracted her husband's gardenia right out of his buttonhole and added it to hers, saying "this is just what I need to wear with my black lace dress tonight."

ON SATURDAY the Ambassador of France, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, entertained at a small luncheon. The party was originally planned for Mrs. Edwin L. James, vivacious French wife of the managing editor of the New York Times, who has been visiting in Washington. Unfortunately, Mrs. James returned hurriedly to New York early Saturday morning with a case of Washington's rampant affliction, the grip.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins acted as the Ambassador's hostess. She will be off on Thursday for a two weeks' visit to Mrs. Benjamin Rogers at Palm Beach, and at the luncheon was the subject of great envy to those of us who feel that spring in Washington is still "far behind."

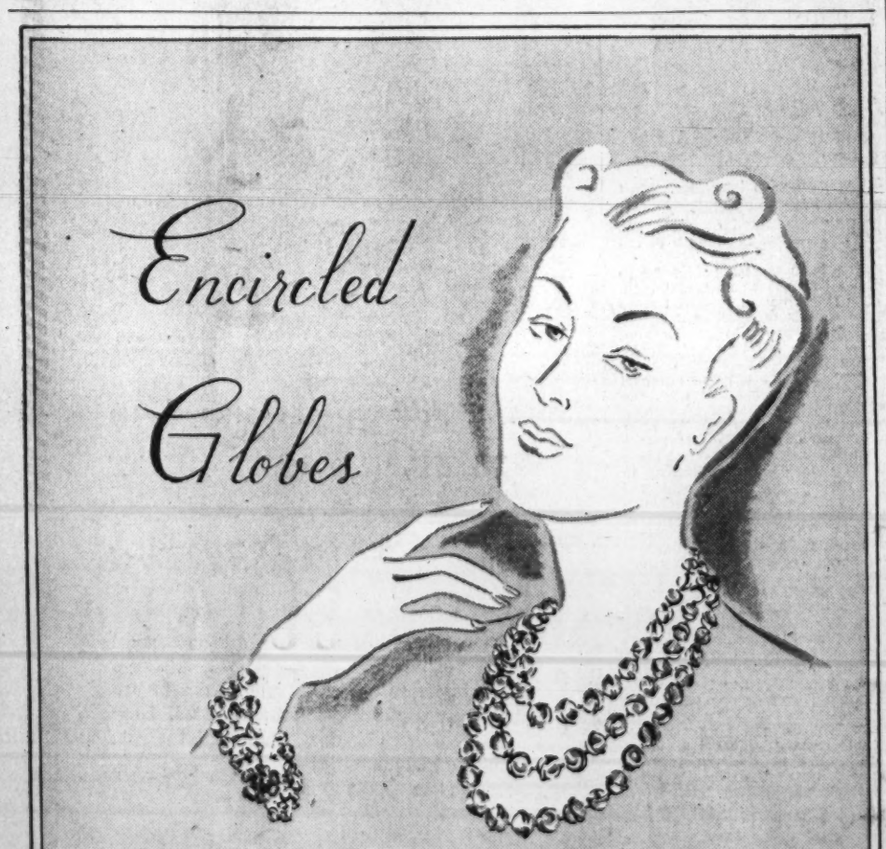
The ranking lady was Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, who murmured contentedly that she "loved Saturday luncheons." That's how the food at the French Embassy makes one feel, I admit.

OTHER PRETTY LADIES were Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey, whose little white elf's cap was trimmed with a long black feather like a question mark, and Mme. Lucet, whose spring costume of sage green sported a crisp white collar. Also present were Jacques Truelle, Anthony Rumbold, Charles Lucet and Harold Hinton.

Flower arrangements at the French Embassy are always unusual and beautiful and on Saturday I spotted one which would be easy enough to do and which would be simple for even a small house. A huge, wide vase of clear glass was completely lined with fronds of coarse fern placed vertically. Seen through the water they made a lovely pattern and concealed the rather unsightly stems of the pink snapdragons which filled the vase.

A DELICIOUS BUFFET SUPPER, dancing and singing proved a perfect recipe for a smart party given the other evening by a hostess who wishes to remain anonymous. Harold Hinton kept a group in voice with such French songs as "Paris Sera Toujours Paris" and "J'ai Ta Main," that catchy, lilting tune invariably offered by Jean Caton, favorite entertainer at La Salle Versailles. The latter would have turned green with envy if he could have seen and heard Baron James Baeyens, ably supported by Mme. Lucet, Helen Davis in a smart gown with military accents of red, white and blue, Denys Smith, Laura Tuckerman, Bunchy Miller and Rafael Lepkowski.

Between songs the energetic guests took a turn at dancing, among them Christopher Bramwell and pretty Bea Phillips, the latter in swirling white tulle; Jacques de Thiers with Rebecca Wellington, whose white jersey frock had a blue jacket. Roberta Mendezo's intricate steps were followed by lovely Felicity Rumbold in flowing red chiffon. Late arrivals and definite additions were Donald and Katherine Hiss, Katherine wearing stunning silhouetted brocade; Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpburg and Sherlock Davis, who had just come from Mrs. Truxtun Beale's dinner in honor of Prince Bertil.



These sparkling crystal clear imported French beads are encircled with colorful bands in lovely costume jewel tones . . . ruby sapphire, emerald, amethyst, topaz . . . three strand necklace, $10; bracelet to match, $5. Only at Garfinckel's. Costume Jewelry, First Floor.

District D. A. R. Indorses Attack on Census, Opposes Bill to Draft Wealth in Emergency

Backs Miss Chenoweth For National Office; Business Session

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

The State conference of the District Daughters of the American Revolution, in session yesterday, indorsed the Tobey resolution calling for deletion of inquiries 32 and 33 from the census schedule and took action opposing Senate bill 1650, sponsored by Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, to provide for drafting of wealth in war emergency.

Miss Lillian Chenoweth presided at the conference, held in Memorial Continental Hall with representatives of the 60 chapters attending. Business occupied the morning and afternoon sessions and, last night the chapter regents gave two-minute reports.

The evening program followed a grand processional such as opens the annual congress of the National Society, D. A. R., in April. Twenty-one pages, young members of the various chapters, all dressed in white, led the procession, followed by the State officers including Miss Chenoweth, and the chapter regents all carrying bouquets.

The United States Marine Orchestra, which presented a program preceding the opening, played for the entrance of the officers. They marched from the rear of the hall to the platform, where they sat during the evening.

Mrs. Oberholser To Become Regent

Miss Chenoweth, retiring regent, who will be succeeded in today's elections by Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, retiring vice regent, was indorsed by the conference for vice president general of the national society in 1941. Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig's term of office will expire at that time.

A feature of the afternoon program was presentation of a fashion show by the two Girl Home Maker clubs of the District, under the sponsorship of Mrs. Claude Allen Cook. These girls, who meet regularly and learn sewing and other arts of home making, with the assistance of D. A. R. members, wore dresses they had made. The grand prize of $5 went to Jeanne Coley, and the first prizes of $2 to Dorothy Smith, of Southwest Club, and Nancy Eberman, of Northwest. Second prizes, of $1, went to Betty Imlay, of Northwest Club, and Gilda Crowell, Southwest. The third prizes, dress material, went to Anna Macini, of Southwest, and Frances Pittle, of Northwest Club.

In addition to the dresses shown by girls over 11, children under that age displayed fancy aprons, posters of attractive living rooms and foods.

Mrs. J. H. Gibson, chairman of approved schools, reported that her committee had presented 29 scholarships enabling children in mountain districts to attend the schools maintained or approved by the National Society D. A. R. In addition, 91 boxes of school supplies, shoes and clothing have been sent to these schools by members of the local chapters.

Banquet to Climax Sessions Tonight

Mrs. William D. Leetch, chairman of the correct use of the flag committee, announced that 31 parade-size United States flags and staffs had been presented to groups requesting them, including such organizations as the Girl and Boy Scouts, both white and colored, Americanization School, Police Boys Club, Washington Boys Club, Young Catholic Daughters, Junior American Citizens Clubs and school auditoriums.

The Americanism committee, of which Mrs. Geoffrey Creyke is chairman, has acted in lieu of a parent-teacher group giving aid to the Americanization School here.

Park View Club To Meet Tuesday With Mrs. Stitt

The regular meeting of the Park View Woman's Club will be held Tuesday at 8 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Ruth E. Stitt, 4114 Illinois avenue northwest. The guest of honor and speaker will be Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Another guest of honor will be Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt, past president of the Political Study Club and of the District Federation.

Chest League To Hold Party

The Community Chest League's planning committee "made a date" for several thousand people in a meeting held yesterday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, at 2145 Decatur place northwest.

Tuesday afternoon, May 21, was selected by the committee for the second annual garden party and exhibit of Community Chest welfare agencies, to be held for the second time on the Charles Carroll Glover estate grounds, under the sponsorship of the Chest League.

Frances Keyes To Speak Tuesday

"Behind the Scenes With an Author" is the topic Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes has chosen for her lecture at the Willard Hotel on Tuesday, at 8:30 p. m. This lecture is sponsored by the District Chapter of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae for the benefit of the scholarship fund. Miss Margaret McAllister is chairman.

Rumania Will Stay Neutral, University Women Are Told

Rumania is strictly neutral, willing to maintain trade with all her old customers, including the belligerents, but she "refuses to become anybody's exclusive bakery or filling station."

This was the position of the country as described yesterday by George Boncesco, financial counselor of the Rumanian Legation, before the local branch of the American Association of University Women. Introduced by Mrs. John Donaldson, chairman of the international relations committee, at the Monday tea, he added another discussion to the series the committee is sponsoring on "The Problems of the Neutrals."

Mr. Boncesco, for 13 years financial counselor of the legation here and before that in London, emphasized the gravity of the problems confronting the neutrals in the European conflict.

"It is on the ability of the neutrals, large and small, to preserve their neutrality, that depends the question of whether this conflict will remain confined to the present belligerents, or whether it will develop into a world upheaval, the consequences of which no one can predict," he said.

He pictured Rumania with a balanced budget, a favorable trade balance, and with all her neighbors except Yugoslavia claiming something from her.

The Balkans, in the past considered the "tinder box of Europe, have become very peaceful," said Mr. Boncesco, and have "declared in uncompromising terms that they would no longer allow themselves to be played one against the other in the chess game of the great powers.

"The Balkan Entente Conference showed that nations composing this political constellation are advancing toward the idea of a mutual assistance bloc against anybody attempting to disturb the peace in that part of Europe."

Tonight there will be two important programs at the A. A. U. W. At the annual dinner for winners of the poetry contest of the branch at 7 o'clock, Robert P. Tristram Coffin, of Brunswick, Me., winner of the 1937 Pulitzer Poetry Prize, will speak.

The Spanish group will present the sixth program in a series of Spanish evenings at 7:45 p. m. with "Colombia" as the topic.

Senor Don Daniel Samper-Ortega, Counselor of the Colombian Legation, will speak on "Colombia as Seen by Her Writers." Enrique Coronado, editor at the Pan American Union, will speak on "The History and Customs of Colombia." Through the courtesy of the legation colored movies will be shown entitled, "Lure of the Andes." Senor Coronado is lending his collection of Colombian handicrafts. There will also be Colombian music. Mrs. Thomas J. Doyle, leader of the group, will be hostess for the evening.

Mrs. Brookings Gives a Dinner For Miss McAfee

Mrs. Walter DuBois Brookings, president of the Washington Wellesley Club, entertained last night at a dinner in honor of Miss Mildred H. McAfee, president of Wellesley, at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women. The guests were members of the executive board of the club.

Miss McAfee and Mrs. Brookings were guests yesterday at luncheon at Madeira School and in the afternoon, Miss McAfee addressed the students. She returned to Massachusetts last night.

W. C. T. U. to Hear Rep. E. H. Rees

Representative Edward H. Rees, of Kansas, will address the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the District tomorrow night at its annual banquet at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Mrs. Ida W. Ramsey, president of the union, will preside. Mrs. Rees and Representative William P. Lambertson and Mrs. Lambertson also will be honor guests.

The program will open with the invocation by Dr. Charles Berry Austin, pastor of West Washington Baptist Church and will include, in addition to Representative Rees' talk, vocal solos by Helen Margaret Shenton, instrumental solos by Dorothy Goodrich Reed and Adele Bush and the readings by Jesse Watt on which he won the grand diamond medal in the W. C. T. U. medal contest.

National Officers Will Attend Meeting

National officers, including Mrs. Mildred Danforth, of Hempstead, N. Y., vice president, will be guests of honor tonight at the meeting of Martha Washington Chapter, Regular Veterans Woman's Association, to be held at The Washington Post Club of the V. F. W., 1032 Seventeenth street. Mrs. Vera Gardner, national deputy chief of staff, will be presented by Mrs. Angela Hopwood, chapter president, as chief speaker.

QUALITY CLOTHES

by experts

There is much talk in the market about quality. We hear that playing up quality merchandise is the thing for the new season. Fine! Not that it affects our program—for we have always dealt in excellence. The "quality movement" is no adventure for us. It has always been the very pulse of our business. So there's nothing of the impromptu about our beautiful clothes. From start to finish they are done by experts—skilled in every detail that goes toward the final perfection.

TOMORROW the Zonta Club will have a birthday party for 34 of its members at the time of its regular luncheon at the Y. W. C. A.

Instead of having birthday observances each month as is the custom with some of the service clubs, the Zontians have two a year—and from the number being honored this time it looks as though most of the members were born between October and March.

Louise R. Stambaugh is chairman and big doings are promised.

CLUB OF THE HOUR—The plight of District institutions will engage the attention of the Club of the Hour tomorrow afternoon at its meeting at the headquarters of the National Women's Party, 144 B street northeast. The president, Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison, has announced Representative Thomas D'Alesandro, of Maryland, as the guest speaker. He will tell of his findings in the recent Congressional investigation.

The program also will include music. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, first vice president and chairman of the program, will present Beatrice Pinkney Jones, head of the music department of Foxcroft School for the past 17 years. Talking on "Music Contrasts," she will illustrate with a series of water scenes: "Venetian Boat Song" (Mendelsohn), "By the Sea" (Schubert-Liszt), "Song of the Volga" (Harriet Cady), "From the Land of the Sky-Blue Water" (Cadman), "A. D. 1620" (MacDowell), and Finlandia's Prayer, by Sibelius, as paraphrased by her at Villa Ainola for the composer in September, 1937.

Members will bring guests to the program.

Officers in addition to Mrs. Morrison and Mrs. Wiley are Mrs. Horace Phelps, second vice president; Mrs. LeVerne Beales, secretary, and Mrs. Leo Kasehagen, treasurer.

Double checks these fashions for their crisp, smart slant on Spring!

CHECKS AND STRIPES

Say Spring and you say stripes! Say checks and you're on your way to chic. There's a great wave of these two fashions in the land. Checks crossing every path in tiny shepherd checks in unabashed plaids. Stripes springing up everywhere—hairline thick or the chalky lines you drew in school.

Both are as fresh looking as Spring itself. Both have been used in striking new ways. In lingerie trimmed business sheers. In "soft" afternoon frocks. In wearable little suits. Sometimes in dove grey, sometimes in beige, sometimes in a clean-cut black and white.

Chalk up a check or a stripe or both from Lansburgh's collection. They belong in an Easter-and-Spring wardrobe!

Rep. Secrest, Horton, Mrs. James Fieser Made Vice Presidents

Senator Taft was unanimously reelected president of the Ohio State Society at the organization's annual meeting and dance at the Raleigh Hotel last night.

Speaking briefly on work of the organization in the last year, he said that "the office of president is largely decorative." Later, the candidate for the White House said he referred to the position of president of a State society.

Representative Secrest, of Ohio; James A. Horton and Mrs. James L. Fieser were elected vice presidents. Ernest H. Van Fossan was reelected to the governing committee, and Strickland Gillilan was made an honorary member of the society and a member of the governing committee.

Reelected were Secretary A. R. Williams and Miss Irene Neikirk, treasurer. The Rev. James S. Montgomery, chaplain of the House, was elected chaplain of the society. S. J. Hess was elected historian.

Bascom Lamar Lunsford, of Asheville, N. C., director of the Folk Dance Festival, sang several American songs and led members of the society in square dances. Supper and dancing followed the meeting.

Curley Urges Sodality Union Work at Home

Washington Needs Attention, He Tells Annual Meeting

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, challenged the Washington Sodality Union at its annual meeting last night to busy itself with work to be done "right here at home," along with its work for rural schools.

"There is no capital city in the world that is not beset by dangers, and Washington is not an exception," he said, urging his listeners to "rededicate yourselves to do your share for the sanctification of Washingtonians."

More than 500 persons gathered in Gonzaga Auditorium to hear reports of the Sodality Union's work. The largest item in its total expenditures of $7,902.22 was $5,450 for rural schools.

The Rev. E. T. Fisher Speaks

The Rev. Elmer T. Fisher, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Midland, Md., representing the rural schools, declared: "Whatever contribution you make in the future, we will match it with sacrifice."

He told of two examples of sacrifices by persons in the poorer rural areas. A miner gave $5 by walking 2 miles each way to his work and saving bus fare, Father Fisher said. A woman, who wears a 25-cent hat, puts $1 each Sunday in the collection plate.

Archbishop Curley reminded his listeners that the Sodality Union's primary purpose was and remains "to help rural schools" and advised them not to spread themselves out into too many fields.

The archbishop said the standard for judging the work was "the growth of the love of God in the soul of each individual." He said it is no use merely to point to great institutions, for "the one great thing is to advance in God's love."

Miss Mattingly Reports

Miss Mary Mattingly, president of the union, reported. She said "we have collected $145,000" from 1923 to the closing of 1939.

The Rev. J. J. Clark, director of the Washington Sodality Union, in his report, said that 31 parish sodalities are now affiliated, including 25 in Washington and 6 in Maryland. Miss Lillian Samuels read the financial statement, showing a balance of $5,291.56 at the end of 1939.

The Sodality Union Choir sang several songs with Miss Margaret Walsh directing.

Capital News In Brief

A Vexing Question

Police Judge Hobart Newman yesterday refused to hand down a ruling on why drinkers get drunk.

James W. Oden, 24-year-old carpenter, of Bethesda, Md., pleaded guilty to intoxication early Sunda and was about to receive sentence when his sister asked the court to be lenient.

"He has a wife and two small children to support," she said.

"Why did he get drunk then, if he has those responsibilities?" asked Judge Newman.

"Well," Miss Oden spluttered, "well, why do other men get drunk?"

"Don't ask me," the judge came back sharply, shrugging his shoulders. "I don't know. I wish I did."

Lenten Musicale

A Lenten musicale will be given at Congress Street Methodist Church at 8:30 tonight. Mrs. A. A. Cannon will be guest organist and the choir will sing.

Others on the program will include Howard Samsel, Mrs. Edward Henneberry, Miss Cathreen Carrico, Mrs. Agnes W. Brown, James L. Magill and Donald Segrist.

Cathedral Heights

The next meeting of the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association will be March 19. It was earlier reported in The Post that the meeting would be held tonight.

Girl, 11, Missing From Home; Last Seen Near Movie

Rose Marie Crismond, 11-year-old student at the Cooke School, was reported to police last night as having been missing from her home at 2540 Fourteenth street northwest since Saturday.

Her mother, Mrs. May Crismond, who is employed in a restaurant in the 800 block of H street northwest, said her daughter was last seen about 8:30 p. m. Saturday in front of a theater on upper Fourteenth street.

The girl is 4 feet 4 inches in height, weighs 85 pounds and was wearing a blue and white checked dress, maroon coat with brown collar and high-heeled shoes. Her hair is dark brown, her eyes blue and her complexion dark.

Dr. J. N. Grear Heads Society To Aid Blind

District Association Elects Officers At Annual Meeting

Dr. James N. Grear, jr., was elected president of the District Society for the Prevention of Blindness at its annual meeting last night in the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Dr. Benjamin Rones was elected first vice president; Mrs. Edward E. Robbins, second vice president; Mrs. Allen L. Vories, recording secretary; W. L. Howenstine, treasurer, and Dr. Mabel H. Grosvenor, corresponding secretary.

The new members of the board of directors are Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of the Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare; Mrs. Arthur Lyons, president of the Service Guild; Mrs. Montgomery Blair, vice president of the Junior League; Lawrence Williams, president of the Board of Trade, and John H. Hanna, chairman of the board of the Capital Transit Co.

Of 1,828 children in six parochial schools, 288 have been found with below normal vision, Mrs. Mary Hooper Spencer, told the society in her annual report. The society is making an eye survey in the parochial schools in cooperation with the school medical inspection service of the Health Department, Mrs. Spencer said.

Appointment of an opthalomologist and a social worker to help visually restricted school children were recommended by a subcommittee on visually handicapped of the avdisory committee on handicapped children, of which Mrs. Vories was chairman.

A survey of lighting facilities in school buildings and additional sight-saving classes for colored children also were urged.

Prince Georges Sets Bonds of Both At $1,000; Woman, Motorcyclist Hurt

Two motorists were held on manslaughter charges by Prince Georges County authorities yesterday after traffic accidents in which three persons lost their lives.

In Washington yesterday a woman pedestrian and a motorcyclist were injured, the woman seriously.

James Macklin, 27, of 523½ Third street northeast, was under $1,000 bond after a man and a woman were killed by his automobile late Sunday night near Muirkirk, Md.

Antony Jacobi, 37, of Ager road, Prince Georges County, was arrested yesterday at a Bladensburg junkyard in connection with the death Saturday night of Alex Thomas Quarles, 61, of 4525 Holloday street, Brentwood. His bond also was fixed at $1,000.

Quarles was struck while walking on Queens Chapel road near University road by an automobile of which the driver left without identifying himself. Jacobi was arrested while purchasing a right headlight, Prince Georges police said.

Confession Reported

The couple killed Sunday night by Macklin's automobile were James Corcoran, 32, of 2814 Thirty-ninth street northwest, and Mrs. Belle Hamilton, 40, of 1105 Seventeenth street northwest. Corcoran was identified at Casualty Hospital by Patrick Shugrue, proprietor of the Penn Wine and Liquor store, 1705 Pennsylvania avenue northwest, where he was employed.

Mrs. Hamilton was identified at the Gasch funeral home, Hyattsville, Md., by Mrs. Annie Isabelle Pope, her daughter, who lives near Muirkirk.

Jacobi's arrest in connection with the death of Quarles followed search for an automobile described by a witness of the accident. Detective Charles N. Thomsen, of the Prince Georges homicide squad said Jacobi confessed driving the death car and said he stopped his machine after striking Quarles, asked a bystander to summon an ambulance, then lost his nerve and fled.

Woman Knocked Down

In Washington, Mary Hohmeyer, 79, of 1309 Columbia road northwest, suffered a fractured right hip when she was knocked down by a car in the 1300 block of Irving street northwest. Police said she stepped from behind a parked truck and walked into the side of the moving automobile, driven by Henry F. Marroffa, 27, of 1720 Capitol avenue northeast.

John Bradford, 21, of Bethesda, Md., was thrown from his motorcycle while attempting to make a turn on the Naval Air Station road at Howard road southeast in the Naval Air reservation. He received first aid at the Army dispensary at Bolling Field and was taken to Casualty Hospital. He suffered face cuts and a possible skull fracture.

Ames Funeral To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Martin Ames, 25, Washington native, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest, with burial in Columbia Gardens Cemetery Arlington, Va.

Mrs. Ames died Saturday at her home in Somerville, Mass. Besides her husband, George Franklin Ames, she leaves a 3-month-old son, Ronald; her parents, L. Herbert and Mrs. Anna George Martin, and a sister, Mary Katherine Martin.

Citizens Oppose Race Bill, Ask More Police, Discuss Taxes, Small Loans and Streets

Lower—Rear Admiral D. F. Sellers (left), vice president, and Commander Frank Slingluff, president. They presided at last night's meeting of the Kalorama Citizens Association in the Adams School

Three citizens' associations last night voiced opposition against Congressional proposal to legalize horse racing in the District, and two other associations urged an increase in police personnel as a crime prevention measure.

Taxes, reorganization, small loan businesses, street improvements, and transportation problems also were discussed by the citizens' units.

National Gateway

Extension of two streets in Northeast Washington and repair of sections of three others highlighted a street-improvement program considered last night at a meeting of the National Gateway Citizens Association.

The organization also adopted a resolution urging increase of the Metropolitan Police force by 125 men.

Petitions are being circulated, it was announced, for resurfacing Channing street from Twenty-second to Twenty-fourth, as well as Franklin and Evarts streets between Seventeenth and Twentieth streets.

The streets committee, headed by Henry Miller, also reported on a proposed new street layout between Bladensburg road and the B. & O. Railroad.

Mrs. Marie C. Node, chairman of a special committee, reported that the Capital Transit Co. has agreed to consider a shuttle service between Rhode Island avenue and Bladensburg road.

Mrs. Ethel A. Coldin and J. D. D'Andelet were elected to membership.

Northeast Citizens

The Northeast Washington Citizens Association approved the District reorganization bill in principle.

Portions of the bill not approved by the association included provisions for a citizens' advisory council, administrative assistant to the Commissioners, finance director and additional power to the Commissioners, allowing them to give pardons.

A bill allowing applicants for liquor licenses turned down by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to appeal to the Commissioners was approved. Also approved was a bill calling for the regulation of podiatry in the District.

The association requested improvement of the H street viaduct. James F. Duhamel discussed historical aspects of Northeast Washington. Three new members were inducted.

Kalorama Citizens

The Kalorama Citizens Association went on record opposing legalized racing for the District and the employment of minor children on the stage at night, and recommended that Congress immediately provide for an increased police force to end the crime wave.

The association reaffirmed its approval of the Sumner resolution calling for a constitutional amendment to give the District national representation.

By other resolutions the association opposed the Tydings bill to broaden the eligibility of nonresident children to attend District public schools without paying for tuition, and asked that Mozart place be made one-way between Euclid street and Columbia road, with parking permitted on both sides.

The group voted to cooperate with the Dupont Circle Association in its efforts to clean the city streets.

Hill Crest Citizens

The Hill Crest Citizens Association last night discussed the bill to legalize horse racing, participation in the final dedication of the John Philip Sousa Bridge, and aid to the Metropolitan Police Boys Club.

Action on the question of bus service between Hill Crest and Anacostia by way of Good Hope road was deferred until after the Public Utilities Commission hearing.

The association saw movies on the World's Fair presented by the Westinghouse Electric Corporation, and admitted two new members. They are Frank V. Niedseldt and Miss Lillian Mason.

West End Citizens

The West End Citizens' Association last night went on record in opposition to any form of horse racing that would permit parimutuel betting in the District.

Attacking proposals of the Reynolds bill, members pointed to loss of revenue in Providence, R. I., and other cities where legalized tracks now exist.

The unit also asked the Capital Transit Co. to shift street cars now running to Nineteenth and F streets to run around Washington Circle.

Appointed to arrange for a banquet later this month were Walter F. Wasson, William R. Brown, Paul H. Sweet and John S. Kelley.

Mrs. Elizabeth Kernan was elected to membership.

Park View Citizens

The racing bill of Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, was opposed in a resolution adopted last night by the Park View Citizens Association, meeting in Park View School.

Another resolution indorsed the measure of Representative Sheridan (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, to investigate and regulate small loan businesses in Washington. The association also indorsed the statement of policy of the Alcoholic Beverage Council of February 15 recommending that wishes of residents be regarded in licensing or refusing to license new liquor stores.

Southeast Businessmen

The Southeast Businessmen's Association last night went on record as being dissatisfied with the present city government, protesting the Board of Trade's recent statement before the House subcommittee on District reorganization, that "the businessmen of the District are satisfied with their government."

The association asked that $490,000 to begin a new Anacostia High School be retained in the 1941 budget.

Karl J. Moser, principal of the Hine Night School, received the association's indorsement for the position of head of the department of business practice in the District public schools.

Burleith

The Burleith Citizens Association urged the National Capital Park and Planning Commission to landscape the Whitehaven parkway west of Thirty-seventh street northwest.

A motion urging substitution of a sales tax for the income levy was referred to committee.

G. W. U. Students Indignant At Miss Gibbon's Departure

Indignation at reports of the "dismissal" of Miss Martha Gibbon, assistant professor of English at George Washington University, spread through the campus yesterday, while Miss Gibbon denounced President Cloyd Heck Marvin.

Dr. Marvin said that "Miss Gibbon is a very good teacher, but there are certain requirements for promotion which she hasn't met." At a conference with editors of the Hatchet, in which her resignation was discussed, he said it was "not a dismissal," but Miss Gibbon had resigned of her own will.

Miss Gibbon said she handed in her resignation Thursday after Dr. Marvin declined to guarantee her further promotion or reappointment beyond 1944. In a letter to the American Association of University Professors, which she made public last night, Miss Gibbon stated her case as follows:

Appointed to the university 11 years ago as an instructor in English, she said she was made assistant professor in 1933, but was not given any increase in salary until 1937. She said that Dr. Marvin assured her in 1933 the degree of doctor of philosophy was not necessary for advancement, but in 1937, and subsequently, indicated the degree was necessary for full professorship.

Only promotion to professorship could guarantee her continuance at the university beyond 1944, she said, because the Faculty Code adopted in 1937 made seven years the maximum term of an assistant professor.

Despite the recommendations of the head of her department, George Winchester Stone, jr., Dean Henry Grattan Doyle and other faculty members, she said, Dr. Marvin refused to promise the desire promotion.

Ramspeck Bill Change Is Opposed

Commission Says Civil Service Gains Would Be Impossible Under Proposal

Civil service extension would be made "practically impossible" to administer by the Nichols-Keller amendment to the Ramspeck bill, the Civil Service Commission said in a report which yesterday cleared the way for Senate committee hearings on the bill.

Chairman Bulow, of the Senate Civil Service Committee, released the report and announced that with its receipt the committee will be called into executive session late this week to plan hearings.

The initial cost of blanketing 200,000 Government employes in the classified civil service, as would be permitted under the bill, would be $400,500.

Government pay rolls would be boosted $14,000,000 annually if the compensation schedules of the Classification Act were extended to 396,000, as contemplated in the bill.

The Civil Service Commission eventually would need an additional $500,000 to $600,000 yearly to administer the extended classification system on the necessary decentralized basis.

Mitchell disclosed that of 23,3[illegible] positions blanketed into the Civil Service by the President's executive order of June 24, 1938, the commission had completed action on 11,04[illegible] and that 7,908 of the jobholders had received full civil service status.

The commission's report, prepared in answer to questions of Senator Bulow, said of the Nichols-Keller amendment:

"The commission believes that the amendment will bring not only serious administrative complications and injustice in individual cases but will result in material loss to the efficiency of the public service."

This amendment in the Ramspeck bill, as passed by the House February 9, would prevent "covering in" any person from a State whose quota of Civil Service employes in the District was over the apportioned share, until quotas of other States were filled.

Mitchell said the apportionment system "is not mandatory, but operates as a preference statute," and applies only "as nearly as the conditions of good administration warrant."

He said that the apportionment had never been in mathematical balance in the commission's history and declared that the Nichols-Keller rider would force keeping apportionment records on a daily basis—"a task which is, from an administrative point of view, practically impossible."

Mitchell added that the amendment would extend quotas to promotions, and "prove a serious obstacle to efficient administration of personnel."

Chief victims of this feature, it was pointed out, would be employes in the apportioned service from the District, Maryland and Virginia, all far above their quotas.

In citing increasing Government costs resulting from the bill, Mitchell declared that "from a long-range point of view these increased costs would be an investment, since the[illegible] will be offset by the increased efficiency of the public service which will result from the applications of the merit system."

Roosevelt Beats Eastern for Met Title, 34-32

The Washington Post Sports

20 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, MARCH 12, 1940 X*

Seabiscuit, Champion of Turf, Is Retired

3,500 See Riders Win In Overtime

West's Shot Decides; Hyattsville Takes Girls' Title Over Bethesda by 31-28

By Bill Burnett.

Everything he ever put into a shot, including an earnest prayer, rode with the ball last night as George West, of Roosevelt, hurled from midcourt to give his team a 34-to-32 overtime victory over Eastern and the Metropolitan Scholastic Basketball Championship.

Nearly 4,000 fans who had sat through a thrill-drenched final game witnessed the blond senior's heave, probably the most important of his career. And all 4,000 contributed to a terrifice yell of joy and anguish as the ball settled in the cords without touching the ring.

It was Roosevelt's second local tournament triumph after a 21-year-arid streak. The well-named Rough Riders won the interhigh championship two weeks ago, beating Eastern for that title, too.

Hyattsville Wins

In a preliminary, Hyattsville's girl sextet came from behind to nip Bethesda, 31-28, for the feminine Metropolitan title.

Whatever consolation Eastern reaped from the feature, other than furnishing Roosevelt's toughest game of the year, was the fact that its star, Bob (Gun) Custer, received the highest individual award of the event. "Outstanding Boy Player" was the title conferred on the tall youngster whose 11 points last night gave him a total of 55 points in the White Tide's three tourney games. The selection was announced by "Fod" Cotton, Catholic U. coach, as head of a committee.

Other awards went to Bethesda-Chevy Chase boys as the best suburban teams, and Margaret Lee, of Bethesda, as the best girl player.

From the opening whistle when West grabbed the tip-off, to the mid-mark of the "sudden death" overtime when West came in for more notice, there was never more than six points separating the rivals. Roosevelt took that lead before Eastern hit the scoring column in the first quarter.

Riders Lead, 10-7

After eight minutes, however, the Riders were ahead only 10-7 by virtue of points by Custer, Moe Shulman and Neil Craig.

For the first time in three games with Roosevelt, Eastern went ahead as soon as the second stanza started. It was 15 to 10, favoring the Tide when West and Hymie Perlo went into action to cut that to 17 to 14 at the rest period.

The difference between a victory and loss for Eastern occurred as the intermission gun sounded. Neil Craig made good on a difficult side shot. It was not allowed by Referee Dallas Shirley though, bringing the Tide rooters to their feet in protest.

Third-period action saw the teams trade the lead four times before Roosevelt wound up on the long end of a 26-25 count. Eastern was never ahead in the last period, but matched its foe's scoring point for point. One minute of regulation time remained when Warren Earhardt finally brought the losers up even with a circus throw. The rest is disappointing history, as far as Eastern is concerned.

Furr Scores Over LaSalle By Decision

McDowell's Stinging Left Wins Decision In Semifinal Bout

By Al Hailey

The tattooed lady on Phil Furr's left arm beheld the most pleasing spectacle of her career last night in Turner's Arena as the Washington comeback-bent welterweight hurdled the biggest object in his path by punching out a close decision over Kenny LaSalle, world's fifth-ranking welterweight.

Phil spotted LaSalle an advantage in years and the favorite's role, but he worked with a desperation and intentness of purpose that was too much for the lazy-working Texas lad.

He went into the ring on the small end of 9-to-5 betting, but kept flailing away with rights and lefts until La Salle was too befuddled to do anything about it.

Decision Cheered

The decision was unanimous for Furr and was greeted by a round of cheers from the 1,500 fans. It was one of the biggest surprises in Washington's recent fight history.

La Salle went through the first four rounds in typical slow-moving style and was content to catch Phil's offerings on his elbows. He didn't seem perturbed even when Furr's jabbing left stabbed him in the face and kidneys—and that was often.

They were on even terms when La Salle rushed out for the fifth and bumped into a barrage of rights and lefts from the Washington veteran. Furr's nose was a fiery red from the first-round pounding meted out by Kenny, and his right kidney was also beginning to glow.

Kenny "dogged" it through the second round, came to life in the third and drove Phil back three times with a lightning-like left hook. He loafed again in the fourth, and Phil took advantage of this fact by pounding him back into the ropes with his right flailing into Kenny's kidney and jaw.

LaSalle Favored

Furr was doped to lose and lose by a wide margin to the classy Texan who administered such a thorough beating to Steve Mamakos last summer in Griffith Stadium. LaSalle looked nothing like his old self. He was lazy, and indifferent. Kenny appeared not to care one way or the other—win or lose.

It was a clear-cut victory, however, Phil had Kenny in trouble at the end if the sixth round, when he actually turned the tide of battle his way. He was pumping away at Kenny from long range and getting in telling blows to LaSalle's exposed chin and body. Kenny's kidneys were striped with glowing welts at the end.

Famed Racers Destroyed in Virginia Fire

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boyce, Va., March 11.—Two famous racers, Tambour, 12 years old, and Sister Ship, 15, were among 11 thoroughbred mares and 7 workhorses destroyed in a fire that swept the main barn and several smaller barns on the Montana Hall estate of Abraham Hewitt, in Clarke County, early today.

Five of the 11 thoroughbred mares lost were in foal. Tambour won the Selima States in 1930, the outstanding stake for 2-year-old fillies, and the American Coaching Club Oaks a year later. Sister Ship was out of Man o' War and a sister to Crusader.

Jacola, the last horse to beat Seabiscuit before his match race with War Admiral, was in a barn on another section of the estate and did not have to be moved. Also on the estate were two stallions, Pilate, sire of Eight-thirty and Lovely Night, two of the outstanding horses last year, and Belfonds, a French Derby winner. They were not moved.

Gaels to Replace 'Slip' Madigan As Football Coach

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, March 11.—The contract of Edward P. (Slip) Madigan, football coach at St. Mary's College for over 18 years, will not be renewed next year, and he will be replaced for the coming season, it was announced tonight.

Announcement of the decision was made by J. Philip Murphy, chairman of the St. Mary's board of athletic control, following a board meeting.

No reason for the action was given, but Madigan has been in ill health for several months with a stomach ailment, and an operation has been under consideration.

Mangrum's Closing 67 Wins at Thomasville

By the Associated Press

Thomasville, Ga., March 11.—Lloyd Mangrum, a lesser light in golf's winter roadshow, laughed at par and the stars today and won $700 top money in the Thomasville Open with one of the season's most brilliant scoring feats.

Nelson kept the pressure on with a 69 in the final round, but Mangrum refused to crack, winding up his great display with an eagle 3 on the long, dog-legged eighteenth hole, to sew it up at 203 strokes, 13 under par for the Glen Arven layout, and 8 strokes better than Henry Picard's winning card of 1,939.

Nelson's 205 was plenty good enough to give him second place and $450, 8 strokes under E. J. (Dutch) Harrison. The Little Rock professional gained his third place prize of $350 with three steady, down-the-grove 71s.

Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., and Craig Wood, of Winged Foot, N. Y., wound up in a fourth place tie at 214 when Runyan slipped to a 73 after rounds of 70, 71 and Blond Craig edged down to a tie after hitting 71, 72 in his first rounds.

Bracketed a stroke further back were Canada's Stanley Horne and Felix Serafin, of Scranton, Pa. The man from Montreal got his with a neat closing effort of 70 which added to a 73, 72. Serafin arrived by whacking out a 68 to pull down the average of a previous 72 and 71.

Pitt Freshmen Get Ultimatum On Pay 'Strike'

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, March 11.—Freshmen athletes at Pitt who complained about the support they were receiving were told in effect tonight to "take it or leave it."

The freshmen are paid 50 cents an hour for odd jobs on the campus under a new athletic code. Athletes who entered prior to 1939 are paid approximately 90 cents an hour for the same kind of work.

The Plebes, in an "ultimatum" released to newspapers, demanded the higher pay; cancellation of their debts to the school; payment of tuition and fees and compensation for injuries an illness.

Director of Athletics James Hagan, who said only one freshman had come to him and he wanted to apologize for the appearance of his name on the "ultimatum," issued this counter-ultimatum:

"Those members of the freshman football squad who have been in the employ of the buildings and grounds department will continue on the same basis they have been for the past six months since their matriculation in September, 1939.

IDRA Takes Post Tourny Thriller, 47-46

With the lead changing hands 11 times in as sensational a game as has marked the 12-year history of the District A. A. U. championship tournament, the Interior Department Recreation Asssociation five nosed out Jewish Community Center, 47 to 46, last night at Heurich gymnasium.

With less than a minute to go, Referee Doran called a foul against IDRA. J. C. C. elected to take the ball outside, but soon lost possession. With 10 seconds to go, an IDRA player was fouled and Coach Frenchie Cohen, of Interior, signaled his club to keep the ball and pass up the chance for another point. Bob Wright, of IDRA, took the toss from outside and dribbled away the last few precious seconds.

The victory sent IDRA into the quarter-finals of the unlimited class. The battle was keen from start to finish and it was not until 27 minutes had been played that more than two points separated the rivals. The IDRA stepped out to a four-point advantage only to have their rivals come back and go to the front once more.

Boosis New Players

The Interior club presented three players, newcomers to Post tournament play. Don Frye, former Findlay College star; Henry Morus, from St. Francis' College, and Bob Wright, a hard-fighting guard. Along with Paul Ray, one of the Indian players, this trio played fine basketball. Ray made some sensational shots before passing from action on personal fouls.

Harold Ifshin, J. C. C. center, carried the brunt of the attack for his club with eight field goals and five fouls for 21 points. Sid Karp,

7-Year-Old Money King Goes to Stud

Howard Decides Not To Point Star for Half-Million Mark; He Won $437,730

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 11.—Seabiscuit, greatest money winner of the American turf, went on the retirement list today.

Owner Charles S. Howard, who achieved a desire of several years' standing to win the title for his 7-year-old thoroughbred, announced today that the famous son of Hardtack will go to stud in northern California this spring.

Seabiscuit's sensational comeback nine days ago, when he captured the Santa Anita $100,000 added handicap, raised his turf winnings to $437,730, breaking the mark of Sun Beau, which, at $376,744, had stood for nine years.

Today's announcement settled the question of whether Howard would set the one-time plater for the half-million-dollar mark, pointing him for the $50,000 Hollywood Gold Cup Handicap this summer.

Howard said that he has been receiving about 100 letters a day asking when he was going to retire the game little horse, and so he decided today to give the answer. Seabiscuit's last race, and his greatest triumph of all, was his eighty-ninth, and marked his thirty-third win.

The 'Biscuit will be shipped this week to Howard's Ridgewood Ranch, near Willets, Calif.

"He's earned a well-deserved rest," said Howard. "He ran well, he's made a lot of money, and from now on he can take it easy."

Harris Names Five Starting Nat Pitchers

Sid Hudson Placed On Regular List; Leonard Is No. 1

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 11.—Like the image that slowly takes form on a photographer's plate, the make-up of the Washington pitching staff for 1940 is beginning to reveal itself in the Nats' training camp here.

Bell-wether of the staff is certain to be a big, beefy, baldish gent who throws a knuckle ball in the summer and operates an Auburn (Ill.) bowling alley in the winter—Dutch Leonard, of course. His feat of winning 20 games with the sixth-place Nats last season approaches the incredible.

Washington's No. 2 pitcher, as Bucky Harris reckons matters, is a big-muscled former farm boy from upper New York State whose southpaw delivery features a potent fastball that crackles. He is easily identified as Ken Chase, who last season looked the part of a great pitcher even when he was losing ball games. Chase is the lad who might oust Dutch Leonard from the No. 1 job and create little surprise among the Nats' bosses.

A young right-handed curve-ball artist only two years out of Class D baseball but with a pitching poise deemed remarkable for his meager experience currently rates as the No. 3 pitcher on Harris' staff. He is the tall North Carolinian, Joe Haynes, who won eight games last year and is now regarded as a solid sort.

The familiar, bow-legged figure of Joe Krakauskas, who is now in a Washington training camp for his fourth consecutive year, has been tentatively pegged for the No. 4 spot on the staff by Manager Harris. But Harris is making reservations in Krakauskas' case. He thinks the broad-beamed Canadian left-hander could be the most sensational pitcher on the club if he would curb his wildness.

No. 5 in Harris' estimate of his pitching staff represents the long gamble he is taking hopefully. He is young Sid Hudson, the tall, right-handed Florida League graduate whom Harris prayerfully hopes is not giving false evidence in training here. Because the Nats' manager is high on Hudson and visualizes him as a rare case of a lad who can make the long hop from Class D to the big leagues and stick.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 11.—Joe Engel, erstwhile big league scout, Minor League Club owner, pigeon-fancier, circus proprietor, raconteur and notary public—to identify him fully—was visibly fascinated by the Washington club's colony of dark-skinned Cubans disporting themselves on Tinker Field.

POVICH

"Keep Engel away from those Cubans," Clark Griffith shrilly yelled across the field to trainer Mike Martin. "I don't like that gleam in his eye. Tell him to come here."

Engel presently reported to Griffith on the bench near the first base line. "You want to see me, Mr. Griffith?" he inquired.

Yes, consarn you, keep away from my Cubans. I know what you're up to. You're thinking you can sign 'em as Mahouts for your elephants."

"No sir, Mr. Griffith," said the big hulking Engel, with a respect that he reserves only for the man on whose pay roll he was for 20 years. "That's where you're wrong. I've sold my elephants. But I'm getting up a rumba band."

Whereat, Griffith chortled heartily, lending significance to his own statements that he kept Engel on his pay roll as a player and scout for 20 years to provide him with laughs. "Tell me how things have been going with you, Joe," said the Nats' owner. "You haven't had your name in the papers for 24 hours."

"Well," said Engel, "things haven't been going so good and I wish I was back on your expense account. That was the biggest mistake I ever made in my life—getting away from that great big swindle sheet of yours. When we go back to town come up to my suite. I'd like to talk some matters over with you, Mr. Griffith."

"Uh-uh, you come up to my suite, I'm not going into your rooms. They're too stuffy."

"I'm talking about your rooms. You're afraid to open the windows because those consarn pigeons of yours will fly out."

"Everything is all right, now," said Engel. "I've sold my pigeons. That is, if they ever come home and I can make delivery. I'm strictly a falcon man now."

If Joe Engel were leaving for Alaska with a brand new line of superhetrodyne refrigerators for the Eskimo market, it would be no surprise to the folks who know Joe Engel. The man who traded a short-stop for a turkey who gave away a $17,000 house fully furnished with garage and a new model sedan among the accessories during a bank-night at his Chattanooga park; who peddled stock on a Chattanooga street corner to buy the controlling interest in the Chattanooga team, must be described at least as versatile.

"And I was a pretty good pitcher, too. Wasn't I Mr. Griffith," Engel was saying. "These people don't believe I led the American League for five years."

Engel is currently en route to Selma, Ala., where he has business with Morris Bloch, most estimable Selma citizen, who shares control of the Selma club with Engel.

"Did I ever tell you what happened the last time I was with Bloch in Selma?" volunteered Engel. "He promised to take me on a tour of the town and said he'd meet me at my hotel. What a tour that turned out to be. I had 500 posters made and tacked one on every post and wall in the place. Everywhere Bloch took me, he saw one. They were beauts, with a big picture of Bloch in the middle, underneath a big 'WANTED' sign. According to the posters I had fixed up, the FBI wanted Bloch for everything from mail robbery to prison-breaks. Bloch turned his office force loose on the posters for a week before they could clean up the last of 'em."

Washington is indebted to Joe Engel as much as anybody else for the teams of 1924-25 which broke the pennant famine of the Capital. The entire Washington infield, with the exception of Roger Peckinpaugh, were the products of Engel's scouting—Joe Judge, Bucky Harris, Ossie Bluege. It was Engel who recommended the purchase of Earl McNeely for $50,000 and who dug up Fred Marberry for the club. Griffith still calls him the finest scout in baseball.

When the Nats had an opportunity to buy Jimmy Pofahl from Minneapolis for $35,000 last Summer, Gifith knew the man for the job of appraising Pofahl. He communicated with Engel and asked him to take leave of his duties as the Chattanooga president to inspect the Minneapolis player. When Engel watched Pofahl in action for three days and wired his approval, the deal was made.

"I've got a new angle, though," said Engel. "I'm training radio announcers. I brought Arch McDonald out from behind a grocery store counter and gave him a job as announcer in my park and that started him on the way to the biggest-paying radio baseball job in the country last year in New York. Down in Chattanooga I've got another Arch McDonald, a little fellow named Tommy Noble, but this time I'm getting part of the purchase price."

Engel didn't do so badly for a trainer he hired a half dozen years ago for the Chattanooga club, either, we learn. "He was too fast for our league," said Engel. Baseball couldn't hold him. He began to branch out with one of those physical culture rackets. He was a smooth talker and he had that bedside manner and now he's getting rich.

"He's got a big place in Chattanooga now—the whole first floor of the Elks Club and he's expanded it by cutting through a wall underneath the jail. The women and the old codgers of Chattanooga think he's wonderful when he turns on all those gadgets.

"He took me into a big place in Chicago one time to help him buy some of those fancy physical culture instruments. I saw a big electrical gadget all lit up like a yacht, with more knobs and gadgets on it than there is in a radio station. I told him to buy that business even if he couldn't pronounce the name of it and even though it cost him ten thousand. I knew he could charge those old codgers 15 bucks every time he threw a switch on that important-looking thing. I only wish now that I had a piece of it."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Miami Beach, Fla., March 11.—We have stumbled through life thinking that the little casino of big league baseball would be an intercity series between the Phillies and the Browns. But yesterday we saw what must be the true low of lows. It was an intrasquad game between the Phillies and the Phillies, and there, my hearties, is an arresting pageant of futility.

CONSIDINE

Sitting in the press box we fell to wondering what possible reason could be advanced for the existence of such a hopeless, feeble outfit.

"What place is there in big league baseball for the Phils?" we asked aloud.

He wasn't kidding. The Phils have been in last place for four years, have been in the first division only twice in 15 years and haven't won a pennant since their first one, in 1915. They finished fourth under Burt Shotten in 1932, and the club quickly sold off its prize heads of stock before this spurt was identified as a mirage.

Last season the team fell into last place on the third day of the campaign and never once rose as high as seventh. It wasn't listed as a record at the end of the season when the big league publicity offices caroled such feats as "fewest number of assists by second basemen named Joe." But it must be some kind of a record for incompetence.

Performances founded upon a pure genius for failure shouldn't be so lightly dismissed. Almost any other enterprise you could name would long since have dissolved if it had been so consistently bludgeoned by the wraith of defeat.

But there was a jaunt air to the Phillies yesterday—the Phils have a goal in life now. They want to scale to the rarified heights of seventh place. That's all.

The Phillies drew considerably less than a lot of minor league clubs last year, but seven home games of night ball drew well enough to enable Gerry Nugent, the controller of the widely scattered Phillies' stock, to pay the customary 6 per cent to the investors. The management would like a team that wasn't a serio-comic doormat, of course, but as long as the doormat keeps them in neckties, okay. Night baseball turned the trick last year. Before that, players had to be sold to insure the 6 per cent.

Doc Protho, the current manager, has given this year's team the air of an athletic organization, instead of the cold, cockeyed business deal it is. He had the boys bouncing around in high fettle yesterday, stopping grounders with their chins and striking out fervently. Actually, the hitting has been so off-center that the club has broken 35 bats, a wanton waste which is certain to have board room repercussions at the next meeting of the minority stockholders.

The squad is now pretty well set for the quick trip into the cellar. It is studded with names you never hear. One of these, Monchak, picked up a job as a chauffeur in Bayonne, N. J., during the off season. Naturally enough, he is reluctant to leave it. Monchak was being counted upon heavily to assist in that quick drop through the trapdoor which the Phillies will pull off just after the mayor sits back down in his box after pitching out the first ball.

Coaches, Officials Select Post's All-District Schoolboy Team

Roosevelt Places Two Players: West, Perlo

By Bill Burnett

Following a policy it originated after the 1939 schoolboy football season, The Washington Post has given every high school basketball player in the District and immediate vicinity a chance for recognition in its All-District schoolboy cage team, released today.

Selected for the first time through a formal poll of all scholastic coaches and a majority of members of the approved Board of Basketball Officials, the team is composed of two players from Roosevelt and one each from Eastern, Gonzaga and Bethesda-Chevy Chase.

That Roosevelt landed a pair, George West and Hymie Perlo, on the big five is significant. The club went through its season with only one setback at the hands of a local schoolboy five against its record. It won the interhigh championship easily—its first crown in 21 years.

Unanimous Choices

Other members of the All-District five come from schools with stellar records for the season. They were the main cogs in whatever laurels those institutions were able to gather.

Perlo and Bob Custer, of Eastern, were the only unanimous choices. Every coach and official named the hard-playing, high-scoring duo before considering anyone else. They were captains of their respective teams and easily the outstanding players. Custer's position as center on the All-District team was necessitated by an excess of forwards, at which spot he usually performed.

In Eastern's rise from the bottom of the interhigh pile to second place and honors in the Metropolitan Tournament, Custer scored more points than any other D. C. schoolboy. His average led the pack, too, and his defensive play was far up the scale. Though only a junior, he will be over the 19-year age limit next season.

Perlo paced a Roosevelt club which had a reputation for "folding" in the stretch. His heady generalship was only part of the reason for his unanimous selection, however. He was among the first ten in the city's schoolboy scoring. Only 17 years old, he has another year with the Riders.

West's Third Year

For George West, Roosevelt forward, his berth on The Post's mythical "Best Team" was his third in three years. The tow-headed youngster's play was on the sensational side, but effective nevertheless. Strictly an under-the-basket scorer this season, his late season splurge landed him near the top in scoring. He will probably attend Duke University next year, following his graduation.

Bob Mulvihill, of Gonzaga, was the particular choice of St. John's coach, Gene Augusterfer, and Referees Maurice Enright and John Jankowski. Augusterfer saw the 16-year-old guard, who has another year ahead, hold his point ace, Frank Cady, to respectable totals in a pair of games for the Catholic title.

Defense Big Point

Mulvihill laid no claim to fame for his scoring—his average was only 4.5 points per game—but his defensive play and his work under both backboards stood out over other stars.

Johnny Shum[illegible] won the fifth place on the team. Bethesda over such strong contenders as Eastern's Moe Shulman, Roosevelt's Ernie Travis and Georgetown Prep's Ray (Sport) Barrett by a scant margin. The slender forward was one of the few two-handed gunners around town, ranking high in point-making with a total of 256 points in 25 games. His efforts stood out in Bethesda's pair of victories over Montgomery-Blair, its hottest county rival.

The U. S. Naval Academy will probably get Shumate next year. Besides playing brilliant ball the last two years, he's an honor student.

Wilson Jayvees Win in Overtime

Wilson Teachers College Jayvee five scored its twenty-third victory in 36 starts last night in the Wilson gym, scoring, 37-36, over the Wallace Memorial Church five in two overtime periods. The regulation game ended 31-all and the first extra period 35-all.

Ray Battaglini scored the winning basket for Wilson, while Harrison was high scorer with 15 points. Klare of the losers missed two foul shots in the second period, needing only one to tie the score.

Eagles, Rovers Clash Tonight At Riverside

Misery loves company, so the Washington Eagles, who were all but eliminated from the Eastern Amateur League race by Saturday's defeat at Atlantic City, hope to complete the overthrow of the defending champion New York Rovers by defeating them at Riverside Stadium tonight.

Second place is about all Washington can hope for now, but the Eagles would derive a certain pleasure in ending the domination of the Rovers, who still have a slight chance of overtaking the pacesetting Baltimore Orioles.

In second place, the Rovers are six points behind the Orioles and two points ahead of the Eagles, with all three teams having seven more games to play.

Should the Rovers come through with one of their rare victories over the Eagles here they would again be in a threatening position and the championship might well hinge on their meeting with the Orioles tomorrow night at Baltimore.

Havana Race Record Set By Good News

Havana, March 11.—Robert Johnson's 65-foot yawl, Good News, of New York, carried away all honors today in winning the eleventh annual St. Petersburg-Havana sailing race with a new record.

Good News crossed the finish line off Morro Castle at the entrance of Havana Harbor at 1:16:43 this morning, the first of 11 contestants. She completed the 184 nautical miles in the elapsed time of 37 hours 16 minutes and 43 seconds, shattering the previous record of 39 hours 26 minutes held by Sirocco since 1937.

Stormy Weather, 53-foot yawl owned by William Labrot, Annapolis, Md., took second place in her class, although she finished fourth in the race with an elapsed time of 39:52:16. Her corrected time in her division was 36:24:16, and her fleet time was 34:34:16.

NATIONAL COLORED SYMPHONY ON AIR TUESDAY, 7:30 P. M.

Great Negro Chorus Delighting Huge Audiences With Beautifully Rendered Afro-American Songs

Sponsored by The National Brewing Company of Baltimore, Md., National Colored Choral Symphony returns to the air Tuesday night, March 12th, at 7:30, over Stations WBAL of Baltimore and WOL of Washington, with a new program of the songs of Negro America.

Seventy-five trained voices, under the direction of Llewellen Wilson, have been welded into a great chorus of mixed voices, which is rapidly making history in its rendition of the songs of the Negro. This chorus has been assembled and is entirely financed by the National Brewing Company, brewers of National Bohemian and the coast-to-coast popular National Premium Beer.

Started as a personal hobby last fall so great has become the popular regard for this chorus that letters by the hundreds are pouring in from both white and colored listeners and so great has been the demand for more and more songs that the program is now presented every Tuesday night over the above-named stations and plans are being perfected to shortly add many additional stations. It has been a long time since any musical event so stirred the interest of the world of music lovers. The simple folk songs of the Negro are presented with the verve and zest for which Negro singers are famous while the more difficult numbers of the great Negro composers are rendered with consummate skill and rare sympathy.

If you have not yet enjoyed these programs, tune in this coming Tuesday night. These programs are presented by The National Brewing Company for the pleasure of its many friends who have come to know National Bohemian and National Premium Beers for their excellent quality. Victor Stages Great Finish To Take Purse

Charlotte Girl Is Second and Mythical King Third; Bull Whip, Favorite, Bows

Tropical Park, Fla., March 11.—Mrs. M. Evans' Shot Put, a J. E. Widener castoff that was running over horses when he finished sixth in the Widener Challenge Cup, equalled the track record for a mile and 70 yards in winning the Coral Way Purse here this afternoon. The 4-year-old gelded son of Chance Shot—Muzzie II, a 6 to 1 shot in the field of nine, came from far back to register by a half-length in 1:41 4-5. It was a J. E. Widener horse—Bucking—that set the track mark a week ago.

Gustave Ring's Charlotte Girl took the place by a head, with B. F. Whitaker's Mythical King third. Two lengths behind came Brandywine Stable's Bull Whip, the favorite.

Shot Put, Mythical King, Bull Whip and Conde Rico, which finished sixth, are eligible for the $10,000 added Tropical Handicap, closing day feature in the current meeting.

Our Ketcham, the horse that held the mile and 70 yards record here before Bucking broke it, was first to assume the lead, but he did not last long. Mythical King and Bull Whip disputed the issue from the turn into the back stretch until well inside the home lane. Bull Whip then weakened badly. Charlotte Girl, which had been raced close up, and the slow starting Shot Put then loomed as threats. Merrill Packer rode hard and succeeded in bringing Shot Put along on the outside in time to win going away.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HERMAR, $41.50, $15.60, $9.70; HI POV, $4.30, $3.00; SEA CHANTY, $5.90.

HERMAR, a forward contender from the start, came around the leader entering the stretch, finished gamely and won going away. HI POW forced a swift early pace and raced FAIR CHANCE into defeat. He held on with good courage when challenged, but was not good enough. SEA CHANTY gained steadily under strong pressure and would have been second in a few more strides. DR. SOUTH was forced wide all the way. FAIR CHANCE quit.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 2:34½. Off at 2:34½. Winner, G. Shaw's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHEKNOWS, $10.40, $4.70, $3.70; EPICAL, $3.60, $2.90; FLORENCE M. $6.10.

SHEKNOWS displayed high speed, raced TRAVEL AGENT into defeat in the early running, came slightly wide turning into the stretch, but continued with determination to hold her opposition safe at the end. EPICAL, well placed on the outside all the way, saved ground at the stretch turn and outlasted FLORENCE M. The latter, forced to race wide the entire trip, faltered in the stretch drive. DONNA LOPEZ finished stoutly.

Daily Double, HERMAR and SHEKNOWS, Paid $326.20.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:02½. Winner, Metcalf & Carr's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SASSY MATE, $8.30, $5.20, $4.20; NEDDIE LASS, $16.30, $9.30; MAEAIR, $14.70.

SASSY MATE broke well, slipped through on the inside rounding the turn, but then swung wide turning into the stretch and outlasted NEDDIE LASS in the final drive. NEDDIE LASS shuffled back on the inside in the opening quarter mile, slipped through between the leaders in the final furlong and closed strongly. MAEAIR, well up from the start, could not better her position in the final drive. WELDING had no excuses.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:28. Off at 3:29. Winner, J. B. Partridge's b. m. (5), by Victorian or The Nut—Moontide. Trained by J. B. Campbell. Value to winner, $775; second, $190; third, $100; fourth, $35. Time, 1:10⅘.

ZEVSON	(Packer)	111	2	6	6	6	6	6	14.80

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOONPOLLY, $36.50, $11.00, $5.10; DOUBLE B., $4.80, $3.70; NIGHT TIDE, $4.70.

MOONPOLLY, displaying much improved form, moved up determinedly between the leaders at the furlong pole and drew away in the final 70 yards. DOUBLE B., a keen contender all the way, swung wide entering the stretch, responded gamely to pressure and outlasted NIGHT TIDE. The latter, on the extreme outside all the way, was carried out in the final furlong, but for that he would have been second. GO HOME outbroke the field, but lacked speed and never seriously threatened.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Coral Way. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 3:57. Winner, Mrs. M. Evans' br. g. (4), by Chance Shot—Muzzie II. Trained by D. McEachern. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:41⅘. (Equals track record.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHOT PUT, $14.10, $5.70, $4.00; CHARLOTTE GIRL, $4.10, $3.60; MYTHICAL KING, $6.00.

SHOT PUT, under steadying restraint while racing on the extreme outside, began to better his position in the final half mile and, responding gamely to punishment, outlasted CHARLOTTE GIRL. The latter, rated off the pace, moved up on the inside of the winner rounding the lower turn, but was not equal to him when the final test came. MYTHICAL KING forced a rapid pace and raced BULL WHIP into defeat, but could not stave off the leaders. BULL WHIP weakened through the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:24½. Off at 4:24½. Winner, C. S. Bromley's br. g. (6), by Sun Flag—Mica. Trained by J. J. Bauer. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:42⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN MICA, $8.30, $4.90, $3.30; WILLIAM PALMER, $5.40, $3.70; WHITE HOT, $3.40.

SUN MICA, lightly restrained in the early stages, saved much ground entering the stretch, finished gamely and outlasted his opposition when the real test came. WILLIAM PALMER, on the inside the first half mile, swung around the leaders leaving the backstretch, lost much ground while gaining and outlasted WHITE HOT. The latter, in the thick of contention all the way, hung in the stretch drive.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:53½. Off at 4:53½. Winner, Woolford Farm's br. f. (3), by Insco—Margaret Lawrence. Trained by R. O. Higdon. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:11⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—INSCOLASSIE, $6.00, $3.80, $3.60; AIR SPEED, $52.20, $22.60; SATIATION, $8.50.

INSCOLASSIE took command when called upon leaving the backstretch, drew out steadily through the stretch to win in hand. AIR SPEED moved up fast midway around the turn, but was no match for the winner. SATIATION closed steadily and disposed of ZAYIN. The latter weakened in the stretch run.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:21. Off at 5:21. Winner, Cosgrave Stable's ch. g. (7), by Flight of Time—Rosern. Trained by A. K. Alexandra. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 1:45⅘.

Another edition of the IDRA-J. C. C. rivalry will be on tap tonight when the 145-pound teams of the same organizations clash at 7:30. An hour later Bolling Field and Mount Vernon clash. In the 9:30 game United Typewriters, winners of the unlimited championship last year, will meet the Petworth A. C. The latter club won decisively in its first appearance with Joe Walters in sensational scoring form.

The Y. M. C. A. unlimited team and the Art Welders 145-pounders were easy first-round winners.

Y. M. C. A., starting slowly, hit a fast stride in the second half to bury the Hyattsville Businessmen, 43-30, and the Art Welders proved superior to Friendship House all the way to win, 36-17. Hyattsville led, 16-15, at halftime.

Center O'Connell, Guard Harrison and Forward Madden were big guns for Y. M. C. A. with 12, 10 and 8 points, respectively. Wilson, of the losing Hyattsville team, took high scoring honors, however, with a total of 14.

Harvey, with 11, and Flinchum, 10, were leading point getters for the Art Welders. West was best for Friendship House with 7.

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

Jockey Buddy Haas, who rode Kayak II into second money in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, has returned to Florida. He was telling friends that the 60,000 crowd that day made so much noise they almost blew his mount off the track. "The noise started," said Haas, "when the first horse stepped onto the track, and throughout the entire parade it never let up a second. That was ear-deafening enough, but at the break it seemed all bedlam had broken loose. Then at the finish, when Seabiscuit was in front to take Sun Beau's place as leading money winner of all time, a tornado could have made no more noise than that crowd of 60,000. It was the loudest and most remarkable exhibition I have ever seen or heard on the turf. Those Californians really go for racing!" Tom Thorpe was receiving the well wishes of horsemen and fellow officials on the occasion of his fifty-sixth birthday. Harpen Belle, 9-year-old daughter of Harpenden—Bluegrass Belle, broke down so badly in her race last Tuesday that it has been decided to retire her to a breeding farm. J. E. Robertson, her trainer, is open to any attractive proposition from breeders. In her day, Harpen Belle held two track records and won upward of $60,000. Robert Wholey has signed to do the riding for the MacThorn Farm, trained by C. P. Winfrey. He will accompany the string to Maryland at the close of the Tropical Park meeting. The entries continue to roll in for the Wireless

Plane and Ship Pact Will Spur Tourist Travel

T. W. T. and Steamship Line to Boost Travel Between Americas

New York, March 11.—Recognizing the prospects of increased tourist travel between the Americas, the Moore-McCormake Lines and Transcontinental and Western Air today announced the signing of a reciprocal agency agreement.

Commander Robert C. Lee, executive vice president of the steamship company, and V. P. Conroy, vice president of traffic and sales for TWA, announced that Moore-McCormack would represent the airline on the East Coast of South America, while TWA would act as agent for the other company in this country.

"By mutual cooperaton, we believe that we will be in a better position to promote travel between the northern and southern hemispheres," Conroy said. "All signs point to the likelihood of an increasing number of vacationists interchanging visits between the Americas, and we are pleased to make this agreement with the major company serving the East Coast South American trade."

$40,000,000 Fleet Expansion

Moore-McCormack has been adding $40,000,000 worth of increased tonnage to its South American service in the 1939-40 period. Seven new ships have already entered the service, three more will go into service within the next three months, while four more new vessels, carrying up to 200 passengers, will be launched this year. The carrier operates a "good neighbor fleet" between New York and Rio de Janiero and Santo, Brazil; Montevideo and Buenos Aires.

The agency agreement is the second TWA has completed with a steamship company within a year. Last summer, before the outbreak of the war, T. B. Wilson, chairman of the board, negotiated a contract with the United States Lines to act as agent for the airline in Europe.

T. & W. Air Sets Winter Travel Peak

Chicago, March 11.—An all time record for interair travel was established by Transcontinental and Western Air during the three-month winter season just ended, with an increase of 76.7 per cent over the previous winter, according to a report issue today by V. P. Conroy, vice president in charge of traffic and sales.

Conroy said that 22,568,023 revenue passenger miles were flown by TWA from December through Ferruary, compared to 12,769,465 flown during the same months a year ago.

Detroit, March 11 (AP).—Noting a "considerable degree of optimism" concerning sales prospects for the current month, Ward's Automotive Reports in its current issue predicts a continued slow but steady advance in the motor car industry's production volume.

It said, however, that the assemblies probably would not get above a level of 110,000 units per week during the month. A "minor rise" is indicated this week over last week's 103,560 cars and trucks, said the survey, which added:

"Dealer orders, reflecting the hoped-for field demand, have begun to move strongly to the factories. This has been particularly true during the most recent ten days or so."

New Cotton Up Old Options Down In Day's Trading

New York, March 11 (AP).—Old-crop cotton deliveries declined today, but new-crop months were eyed with favor by buyers. The final range was 7 points lower to 4 higher.

In the old list, March was hard pressed following news of an increase in certificated stocks (cotton eligible for delivery on futures contracts). At one time the spot month had dropped 65 cents a bale, but short covering helped the delivery regain its balance.

Bombay and Liverpool sold May and July actively, presumably against purchases abroad. Liverpool premium on New York narrowed about $1, while the Bombay discount widened around 75 cents a bale.

Wheat Prices Edge Higher On Peace Talk

Pessimistic Domestic Reports Offset Rain And Snow Elsewhere

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 11. — European peace talk disturbed the wheat market today and prices bobbed up and down frequently and at times very quickly, closing only fractionally higher than Saturday.

Most of the market's strength, which accounted for net gains of a cent or more at one stage, was based on pessimistic crop reports from the domestic wheat belt, offsetting news of receipt of rain and snow in some areas and forecast of more moisture the next 24 hours. Freezing temperatures cause some comment but most experts expressed belief it was not cold enough in areas where wheat was most susceptible.

After showing gains of as much as 1¼ cents and losses of as much as ⅜ cent at various stages, wheat closed unchanged to ½ higher compared with Saturday's finish, May, 1.04⅛@1.04⅜; July 1.02¼@1.02⅜. Corn was unchanged to ¼ lower, May, 58⅜; July, 57⅝@57¼; oats ¼ off to ⅛ up; rye unchanged to ¼ down and lard unchanged to 10 lower.

Pipelines to Carry Pulverized Coal, New Achievement

Cleveland, March 1.—Just revealed is the fact that much progress has been made in development of a system for transporting pulverized coal through pipe lines, much in the same manner as oil is now piped to all parts of the country, the magazine Steel reports today.

The process is extremely simple, the pulverized coal being suspended in water and pumped from mine to consuming centers. A patent already has been granted on the process and it is believed that in addition to making coal shipment much cheaper it will make available coal deposits too remote from transportation for economical use.

The piping of coal has long been a dream of both producers and consumers, but up to this time technical limitations have stood in the way.

It is believed that in handling most coals there will be no detrimental effect in transporting them in the water solution, the coal being thoroughly dried following its pipeline journey.

Prices Back and Fill, but Hold Firm Steel Activity a Bullish Factor Local Traction Bonds Strong

New York, March 11.—The stock market backed and filled while the composite average showed no change today. Actually the day was not as lost as the figures would indicate, for there was some cheerful news from the steel industry and under normal conditions some selling might have been expected from the peace negotiations on the Finnish front. Any selling of this type which may have developed was easily absorbed and the tendency of the market was to hold within a narrow range.

The steel news did not affect the steel stocks particularly, but it had a beneficial effect upon the general market, probably because those who have been following the customary indices of business have been looking for some turn from the long decline, and the steel industry is frequently among the first to register changes. Since the rush of buying which accompanied the declaration of war last December there has been a sagging tendency in most of the indices. The decline has been slowing of late, but it has still been on the downside.

Consequently there was some surprise and considerable satisfaction today when the weekly report of operations, as compiled by the American Iron & Steel Institute, showed operations of this important industry had turned the corner. There was an increase, an insignificant one to be sure, but nevertheless a change from the steady decline which has prevailed in 1940.

The gain was only one-tenth of a point, but it has been many weeks since anything but a decline was recorded in these weekly reports. One swallow does not make a summer, but it is a satisfaction to see the one. It is a sign of spring, and Wall street can stand a little of that.

Favorable News

There was other favorable news, which doubtless encouraged some buying to offset the selling which might have been caused by the peace negotiaitons. The Automobile Manufacturers Association reported factory sales of new cars and trucks for February as 421,690 units, a gain of 32.8 per cent over a year ago. For that particular month it was a record since 1929. In addition there were a number of annual meetings at which the predictions of executive officers leaned to the favorable side. Lammot duPont, of the duPont company, for instance, estimated that first-quarter business was running 20 per cent ahead of a year ago.

Within the market itself there was a good demand for a time in the aviations, but it failed to hold. Motors did fairly well and there was good demand for equipments and stores. Metals eased after their performance of last week. Rails held on with little change. Interest was centered again in the lower-priced issues, with Packard leading the list with a fractional advance and Curtis-Wright next, unchanged. The tractions continued to be in demand, with Manhattan Railway modified guaranteed the leader on a good fractional gain and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit active and slightly higher.

Schenley and Celanese

Schenley was well liked because of its annual statement, advancing 1¼, as was Celanese, up 1⅛. Gold mining shares held around their recent lows. In the higher grade investment issues, American Telephone made a new high but its net gain was small. The company, in sending out its proxy statements today preparatory to the annual meeting, was the first big company permitted by the SEC to omit from its statements the estimated cost and the name of the payer. Usually, of course, the payer is the corporation itself, and for A. T. & T. it is quite a respectable figure, because of the large number of stockholders.

Foreign Dollar Bonds Strong

New York, March 11.—Foreign dollar bonds and local traction issues were the bright spots of the listed market today, both groups showing sizeable gains. The course of Finnish peace negotiations sent the foreign issues higher, while further progress toward unification aided the local tractions. Treasury bonds were quiet and firm. The tone was generally good in the corporate department. Turnover amounted to $6,190,000.

Finland 6s jumped 5½ points on the peace negotiations and gains of 1 to 4 points appeared in Norwegian and Danish issues. There were also sizeable gains in German, Australian and Canadian obligations, apparently on the theory that a settlement of the Finnish question might contribute to general peace. Italian and Belgian bonds followed the others upward. Brazilian issues were irregular, as traders studied the partial payment proposal, but other Latin-Americans were in quiet demand.

Interborough and Manhattan Railway issues gained 1 to 2½ points, and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit securities also were in demand, as technical progress was made toward unification. Speculative railroad groups were in quiet demand. The holding company groups showed points of strength, and other special divisions were steady to firm.

United States Treasury securities were marked higher by smallest fractions. Investment business in best grades corporate bonds was dull, but prices remained steady.

N. Y. City Bank Stocks Lower for Week

New York, March 11.—New York City bank stocks eased off slightly during the past week, according to figures compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster, specialists in bank and insurance stocks. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on Friday was $1,578,158,000 compared with $1,581,548,000 at the close of the previous week, a decline of $3,390,000, or 0.21 per cent.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market also continued to register small declines during the past week. The aggregate market value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on Friday was $633,103,000 compared with $636,992,000 at the close of the previous week, a decline of $3,888,000, or 0.61 per cent.

U. S. Steel Shipments Increase in February

New York, March 11 (AP).—United States Steel Co. reported today a decrease in February, as compared with January, in the shipments of finished steel products by its subsidiaries, but an increase in comparison with February, 1939.

Shipments last month totaled 1,009,256 net tons, a decrease of 136,336 tons from the $1,145,592 of January but an increase of 261,829 from the 747,427 of February, 1939.

Realty Bonds Only 1 Per Cent Over Year Ago

Pittburgh Issues Make Largest Advance This Year, Up 6.8 Per Cent

New York, March 11.—At the close of February real estate bond prices were just 1 per cent ahead of the 1939 close, according to the latest Amott-Baker realty bond price average bulletin. The average price of a $1,000 bond is now $317, compared to $314 on December 31, 1939. During February this average suffered a decline of $1 per $1,000, which represents a loss of 0.3 per cent in the 29 days.

Sixty-four of the 200 issues used as the basis for the average increased in price, 77 closed at the same level, while 59 showed lower bids at the end of the month.

New York issues remained unchanged at a price of $306 per $1,000 during February Pittsburgh issues increased 2.6 per cent, Boston issues 0.9 per cent and Philadelphia issues 0.4 per cent. Buffalo, in common with the average as a whole, showed a drop of $1 per $1,000 to a price of $273, a decline of 0.4 per cent.

For the two months, Pittsburgh issues showed the greatest advance with an increase of 6.8 per cent followed by Boston up 3.5 per cent, Philadelphia up 2.9 per cent, New Pork up 0.7 per cent. For this two-month period Buffalo again showed a decline amounting to 4.2 per cent.

Apartment hotel issues averaged $252 per $1,000 at the close of 1939, at the close of January, 1940, and again at the close of February. Office buildings improved 0.7 per cent, theaters 5 per cent and housekeeping apartments 0.3 per cent in February. For the two months, theater properties lead with a rise 5.5 per cent to the highest average price in any category, namely $745 per $1,000. Hotel issues have risen 3 per cent in the two months, office buildings 1.7 per cent and housekeeping apartments 1.5 per cent. A miscellaneous division of the price average, including various specialty buildings, show a decline of 10 per cent so far during 1940.

In Washington, according to the index, Hamilton Realty 1st 5s of 1945 showed no change in the month; the Mayflower Hotel 1st 5s of 1950 were up 1½ per cent; National Press Building 1st 3-5s of 1950, were off ½ and the National Press adj. inc. 4½s of 1950 were up ¼ per cent.

Mo. Pac. Fights For Common Stock

Cleveland, March 11 (AP).—The Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. continued today its efforts to induce the Interstate Commerce Commission to find Missouri Pacific stock should have some equity in the railroad when it emerges from reorganization.

The company, in a brief filed with the ICC, contended the Government agency erred in 14 particulars in its reorganization plan, announced January 17. ICC declared there was no equity for holders of Missouri Pacific common and preferred and said stockholders thuse should have no participation in the railroad when reorganized.

Du Pont Business 20% Over Year Ago

Wilmington, Del., March 11 (AP).—Current business of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. is running about 20 per cent ahead of the first quarter of 1939, Lammot du Pont, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting today. In the 1939 first quarter the big industrial company reported net sales of $66,641,733 and net profit of $19,075,376, including income from the company's investment in General Motors Corporation.

Steel Operations Up To 64.7 Per Cent

New York, March 11 (AP).—Steel mills will increase their production schedules this week for the first time since the first of the year, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today. Output will be at the rate of 64.7 per cent of capacity, an increase of 0.1 of 1 point from 64.6 per cent in the preceding week. A month ago mills operated at 68.8 per cent of capacity and a year ago 55.7 per cent.

Steel men said the increase was apparently in response to new spring buying. Most of January and February production was based in large part on backlogs built during the industrial revival in the last quarter of 1939.

Santa Fe Buys 1,900 Box Cars

Chicago, March 11.—The Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co. announced today the start of delivery of 1,800 conventional type box cars ordered by the Santa Fe Railroad. Completion of the contract is expected within the next three months. The new cars, each of which has a capacity of 50 tons, are being built in the company's Michigan City, Ind., shops.

According to H. H. Gilbert, vice president of Pullman-Standard, the Santa Fe order is the largest of its kind marked on the company's books for early 1940 delivery.

Yankees Nose Out Reds, 8-7

Joe Gordon's Single Scores Winning Run

Game Is Marked by Wildness of Hurlers; Hubbell, Schumacher Star as Giants Win

By the Associated Press

Tampa, Fla., March 11.—The New York Yankees started in today where they left off in the fourth game of the World Series last fall and beat the Cincinnati Reds, 8-7, in an exhibition game.

The Reds made a pretty good scrap of it, although they were ahead only in the first inning. It wasn't until the ninth that Joe Gordon singled home young Buddy Blair with the winning run. The game was marred by the wildness of the numerous pitchers, especially Cincinnati's Johnny Vander Meer, who issued half the total of 15 bases on balls. The most effective was Steve Sundra, of the Yanks, who blanked the Reds with one hit in the last three innings.

GIANTS BEAT CARDS

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 11.—Carl Hubbell and Hal Schumacher, two uncertain pitchers upon whom the New York Giants are banking heavily, made impressive debuts in the "Grapefruit League" today as the Giants whipped the St. Louis Cardinals, 6-3.

Hubbell gave up two hits and all three runs but an error by Bill Jurges caused most of his trouble. Jurges bobbled one with two out and two on base, letting the first run score. Enos Slaughter then doubled two more home. Schumacher pitched hitless ball in his three-inning turn and Bill Lohrman gave the Cards only one hit in the last three.

ATHLETICS WIN

Anaheim, Calif.—The Philadelphia Athletics won their seventh exhibition game in eight starts today, coming from behind an 8-to-1 score to beat Los Angeles, of the Pacific Coast League, 14 to 13.

The A's bunched most of their 17 hits in the third and fifth innings, when they scored five and seven runs, respectively. Los Angeles piled up its early lead off Buck Ross, then was stopped by Elon "Chief" Hogsett, who replaced Ross in the fourth. A strong wind made many fly balls fall for hits.

Before the game the A's second baseman, Benny McCoy, was hit in the Adam's apple, but not seriously hurt.

JOHNNY ALLEN SIGNS

Fort Myers, Fla.—The Cleveland Indians regulars made it two out of three today, blanking the rookies, 6 to 0, in a six-inning practice game that brought glory to towering Mike Naymick, neophyte pitcher.

Pitcher Johnny Allen ended his holdout today after a conference with club officials. Terms were not disclosed, but President Alva Bradley said the contract provided no bonuses. Allen's contract called for $19,000 per season for the past two years. Only Pitcher Willis Hudlin and Catcher Frankie Pytlak remain unsigned.

Two Colonial 'Shooting Stars' Take Aim in Practice

Coach Parsons' G. W. Riflemen Boast Fine 12-Year Record

By Gershon Fishbein.

There is no truth to the rumor that Maj. Ernest Brown has recruited the George Washington rifle team in his anti-crime drive but nevertheless in the past 12 years of intercollegiate competition the Colonial marksmen have literally shot themselves into the foreground of the National rifle picture.

Three times third, five times runner-up and twice national intercollegiate champions—that's the record of the G. W. teams and to listen to the sermons of Coach Frank Parsons there are more of the championship variety in the offing.

Modern rifle upsurge at G. W. dates from 1928, mainly because that was the year Parsons transplanted his shooting ability into coaching talent and put the downtown school on the rifle map.

Suave, non-flamboyant Parsons came by his coaching prowess naturally, being one of the country's outstanding marksmen both during his college days at G. W. and after he graduated. As recent as 1938, he was selected on the American team which won the world's rifle championship at Belgium.

Wit hill-concealed modesty bordering on reticence, Parsons chooses to steer the talk to his rifle team, however. His only words concerning his personal collegiate triumphs are represented by an off-the-mouth "Just say I won the National individual free rifle championship a few times."

George Washington's first national championship under Parsons' coaching came in 1928, his initial year at the school. As a player, his teams won the championship of the Nation three times but considering the small number of schools entered, the honor, as rifle honors go, was somewhat hollow.

Then came "lean" years in which George Washington sank as "low" as eighth place in the country's standing but a second place in 1935 signalled the rise of the Colonials to the top rung of the ladder.

It was in 1938, a red-letter year in George Washington rifle history, that Parsons coached his second national champion. The 1938 team was his best, he says.

And small wonder! All he had on that team were not one, but two All-Americans on a five-man team. The ace of the outfit was one Dana Wallace who was acquiring All-American recognition for the second straight year. The other national figure was Bill Wetzel.

Two individual national champions have been spawned from the G. W. rifle range, just by way of augmenting the team's fine record. The aforementioned Wallace, by all odds the outstanding shooter Parsons has produced and William C. Barr, jr., now a physician, were those whose shooting earned them individual championships.

Rifle, like other sports, has its disadvantages and Parsons is the first to admit it. "It's undoubtedly one of the most boring sports in existence unless one is vitally interested. Usually it's just the final string of firings which can hold the average spectator's interest."

Withal, Parsons has done all right at G. W., though. His teams have beaten such sharpshooting powers as Army, Navy, Carnegie Tech, Georgetown, Maryland, North Carolina, Alabama and all the Big Ten schools, in his 12-year stretch on G street.

Squad of 21 Seeks Berths On G. W. Nine

Baseball practice at George Washington perked up yesterday as the infielders and outfielders reported for the first time to Coach Ed Morris in the gymnasium.

With the arrival of the nine additional players, the squad was swelled to a total of 21, 12 pitchers and catchers having been at practice for two weeks. Morris announced plans for extensive outdoor practice as soon as weather permits.

Last year's crack freshman team forms the nucleus for the Colonials' first varsity nine in four years. Lee Kushman, Jack Redinger and Toby Bright, all local boys, are expected to bear the brunt of the pitching, while Lud Urick, the football player, will handle most of the catching.

Attention Al Stokes

Beaver Dam Women's Golf Heads Named

Assisting Mrs. Frownfelter will be Mrs. Elsie Fisher, secretary; Mrs. Malcom Dent, vice chairman; Mrs. William Kerr, treasurer, and Mrs. Ben Dyers, assistant treasurer.

Mrs. Ed Heimer will head the ways and means committee, while Mrs. Ralph Byers, Mrs. Robert Greene, Mrs. Bessie Taylor, Mrs. Charles Grossman and Mrs. Eddie Bean will assist.

Chairman of the tournament committee is Mrs. Malcom Dent, while Mrs. Elbert Harris, Mrs. Russell Brown and Mrs. Albert Haas are other members.

Mrs. Jack Palmer will be in charge of the tournament records, with Mrs. A. Tucker chairman of the prize committee, and Mrs. Peter Davies as assistant. Mrs. Charles Range, chairman of the handicap committee, will be assisted by Mrs. George Luce.

Mrs. J. R. Griffin will head the hospitality committee, with Lila Sari, Mrs. Joe Balestri, Alice Kay, Mrs. Douglas Mattison and Mrs. Samakow also appointed. The ringer tournament will be in charge of Chairman Mrs. James Gipp and assistant, Mrs. Charles Griffin, and the flower fund will be under the direction of Mrs. Miles Sterns and Mrs. Porter M. Miller.

Durham Cage Meet Entries Completed

By the Associated Press

Durham, N. C., March 11.—Runnelstown, champions of Mississippi, and Harrodsburg, a leading Kentucky high school outfit, accepted invitations tonight to participate in the Duke-Durham Southern high school cage tournament here Friday and Saturday.

Entry of these teams closed the list of eight quints which will battle for the championship. Other entries are Durham High, North Carolina, and defending champions; Lynchburg, Virginia champs; Lanier, of Macon, Georgia champs; Roosevelt of Washington, District of Columbia champions; High Point, western division winners of North Carolina, and Parker High, of Greenville, S. C., undefeated in 19 games.

Durham, Parker High, Lanier and Roosevelt were seeded tonight in that order.

Durham drew Lynchburg as its first-round foe. Runnelstown will face Lanier in the other game of the top bracket. In the lower bracket, Roosevelt plays Harrodsburg and High Point meets Parker.

First-roond matches will be played Friday morning with Roosevelt and Harrodsburg opening the tournament at 8:30 o'clock. Parker and High Point will clash at 10 o'clock, Durham and Lynchburg at 11:30 and Lanier and Runnelstown at 1 o'clock.

DePaul, 'Dukes' Win in Garden

New York, March 11.—Manhattan was left without a representative in the Metropolitan Invitation Basketball Tournament tonight when the Iron Dukes of Duquesne ousted St. John's 38 to 31 after De Paul, of Chicago, eliminated Long Island University in the first game, 45 to 38. Duquesne, playing the entire game without a substitution, ran up its nineteenth victory in 20 games this season in impressive fashion after getting away to a poor start. The St. John's Redmen, performing before 10,551 hometown fans, worked up a 12-4 lead but the Dukes whittled it down and finally went ahead 18-16 at the half.

Lincoln Basketers Defeat Collegiates

Lincoln University cagers defeated the Collegiate All-Stars of the Banneker Recreation Center, 37-35, last night. Trailing, 19-16, at half-time, the locals stayed within two baskets throughout the second half, but could not make up the deficit.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A veteran player who had a losing streak had an opportunity to recoup because of what he calls "poor defensive doubling." Due to his opponent's ill-advised double of a small slam at hearts, our friend was able to escape to six no trump, and by placing the important cards of the adversaries' voluntary information, he made the contract handily.

The cards and the bidding are shown in today's box. West opened the jack of spades and declarer won with his ace. East's double had revealed where the missing heart honors were, and West might have only the king of diamonds to justify his optimism. When declarer found the club suit divided favorably he cashed his king and queen of spades, returned to his hand and ran the remainder of his clubs and the ace of diamonds, as East discarded everything but his hearts. A heart lead then threw East in, to play away from the second honor, giving declarer both the ten and the ace. He made six no trump, losing only one heart trick.

Had East attempted to save two hearts and one diamond for an exit, declarer, noting the two heart discards, would simply have established a second heart trick, giving up one to East and holding the ace of diamonds to spike East's return. "Without the double," comments the veteran player, "I would probably have come a cropper."

A few random notes collected from an unpaid bill . . . We're glad you like the new transmitter at Wheaton. . . . thousands of people poured through the comparatively small building Sunday and the engineers assigned as lecturers had to abandon that for the more essential job of traffic cop. . . . the outpouring was pretty flattering, but there was one slightly sour note. . . . so many people came it was virtually impossible to show the transmitter as we would like it shown. . . . so drop by and see it again some afternoon. . . . the boys will be glad to show it off. . . .

Gordon Hittenmark's new radio magazine will be out Saturday. . . . the estimable Mr. H. has been working his lily white fingers to the bone and advance proofs make it look like the boy has something there. . . .

Archibald McDonald, the gay caballero of Wheatyville, is now in Orlando, Fla., loosening up his tonsils and vocal cords for the coming baseball season. . . Arch will cut some records while he's down with the Nats and WJSV will play them on the sports review. . . Joe King will do most of the McDonald sport stint while Arch is away and Joe has just laid in a good store of those crunchy, crackly you-know-whats because he'll be in there with Arch this summer taking Warren Sweeney's place. . . .

And speaking of that affable Irisher, it certainly is great hearing him do those Philharmonic broadcasts every Sunday . . . he does a great job because he knows what he's talking about and he can actually pronounce those foreign names. . . . it would be a great break for all concerned if some guy named Smith would write a classic. . . . something romantic like "Concerto in B flat, opus No. 237¼" by Smith . . . Warren knows that heavy music like McDonald knows batting averages and he's just as fond of it, too . . . the CBS lads are to be congratulated for having the good sense to turn over the important Philharmonic work to Warren. . . . it'll do him a lot of good and it won't hurt the Philharmonic a bit. . . .

NUTS AND JOLTS

Another Nero Wolfe Story

BY REX STOUT

OVER MY DEAD BODY

Surprises awaited Archie Goodwin, Nero Wolfe's confidential secretary, when he accompanied Carla Lovchen to Nikola Miltan's fencing studio. Carla wanted Wolfe's help for her friend, Neya Tormic who claimed she was the mystery solver's daughter. Nat Driscoll, a fencing pupil, had accused Neya of stealing diamonds from his coat. Neya denied being away from her pupil, Mr. Ludlow. Mr. Loudlow, however, said that Neya had gone to fetch cigarettes from his coat, which was exactly like Driscoll's. Then Driscoll walked into the meeting with his attorney who announced that the whole thing had been a terrible mistake and that the diamonds had been taken to the jeweler by Driscoll's secretary. Driscoll apologized, but when lawyer Thompson wanted Neya to sign a quittance, Archie said no. This precipitated an argument so Archie signed it "Queen Victoria," just to shut up Thompson, and then reported to Wolfe by telephone. This cleared up the diamond situation, but Wolfe asked if Archie had learned anything about the mysterious paper hidden in one of Wolfe's books by Carla on her first visit to him. Wolfe ordered Archie to bring Neya to his office, so Archie returned to Miltan's studio to get her.

CHAPTER 7

HIS WIFE had uttered a foreign exclamation, of surprise or maybe dismay. "The col de mort," she told him. "It's not here. Did you remove it?"

"I did not. Of course not. It was there—I'm sure—"

He got up and trotted over to the cabinet, and I arose and wandered after him. Together they stared at a spot. He stretched, and then ducked, to inspect the other shelves.

"No," she said, "it's not there. It's gone. There is nothing else gone. I was in favor long ago of having a lock put on—"

"But my dear." Miltan looked defensive. "There is no sensible reason that could possibly exist why anyone would want to take that col de mort. It was a nice curiosity, but of no particular value."

"What kind of a little thing?"

"Oh, a little thing—look." He put an arm through the open door of the cabinet and placed a finger upon the point of the epee which was displayed there. "See? It's blunt."

"I see it is."

"Well, once in Paris, years ago, a man wanted to kill another man, and he made a little thing with a sharp point, very cleverly, which he could fit over the end of an epee." He took the weapon from the shelf and dangled it in his hand. "Then, with the thing fitted on, he made a thrust in quarte—"

He made a lunge at an imaginary victim in my neighborhood, so unexpected and incredibly swift that I side-stepped and nearly tripped myself up, and was perfectly willing to concede the championship. Just as swiftly he was back to normal position.

"So." He smiled, and returned the weapon to its place. "A thrust in quarte gets the heart, theoretically, but that time it was not theory. A member of the police who was a friend of mine gave me the little thing as a curiosity. The newspapers called it col de mort. Neck—no, not neck. Collar. Collar of death. Because it fitted the end of the epee like a collar. It was amusing to have it."

"I hope not gone." Miltan frowned. "There is no reason for it to be gone. There has been enough talk of stealing around here. We will find out. We will ask people."

"I hope you find it," I told him. "It sounds cute. Speaking of asking people, I was about to ask you if it would be okay for me to have a little chat with whoever it is that cleans up the fencing rooms."

"The porter. But I can't imagine why you should want—"

HIS WIFE interrupted him, with her eyes on me. "He wants to find out if cigarette stubs and ashes were found in the room where Miss Tormic and Mr. Ludlow were fencing yesterday," she said calmly.

I grinned at her. "If you will pardon a personal remark, Mrs. Miltan, I might have known from your eyes that you had that in you."

She merely continued to look at me.

"For my part," Miltan declared, "I don't see why you should want to know about cigarette stubs, and I don't see how my wife knew you wanted to. I am slow-witted."

"Well, you have to be slow at something, to even up for your speed with that sticker. May I see the porter?"

"No," Jeanne Miltan said bluntly.

"Why not?"

'It isn't necessary. I don't know what is in your mind, but I saw you looking at Miss Tormic, you who were supposed to be here as her friend. If you want to know whether she and Mr. Ludlow were smoking cigarettes, ask her."

"I will. I intend to. But how could I do her any harm by discussing the matter with the porter?"

"I don't know. You may mean no harm. But this affair of yesterday and today is ended. It was bad. It could have turned out very badly for our business. It is a very delicate matter, the tone of a place like this. A breath may destroy it. Even if you mean no harm to Miss Tormic or to us, I shall tell the porter not to answer your questions if you do see him. I am plain-spoken. Nor may you go to the salle d'armes and inspect the pads to see if the strap of one is broken."

"What makes you think I wanted to?"

"Because I don't take you for a fool. If you were curious about the smoking, naturally you would also be curious about the broken strap."

I shrugged. "Okay. Anyhow, you used the right word. I was just curious. As you know, I'm a detective, and I guess we get into bad habits. But if you're also aware that he dishes out trouble only to people who have asked for it."

SHE GAZED at me a moment, turned and closed the sliding door of the cabinet, and then returned to me. "This morning," she said, "my husband was saying that he would engage Mr. Wolfe to investigate the disappearance of Mr. Driscoll's diamonds. Miss Tormic was present. She declared that she had engaged Nero Wolfe to act in the matter in her behalf. Shortly afterwards her friend, Miss Lovchen, asked permission to go out on an errand. It is not only detectives who are curious. I am sometimes curious. If I were to ask—"

She stopped with her mouth open, her body stiffening. Miltan spun on his heel to face the door to the hall. I did the same. The yell that had split the air sounded like something that you might expect but would certainly resent if you found yourself alone in a jungle at night.

When the second yell came all three of us were running for the door. Miltan was ahead, and in the hall he bounded for the stairs with us after him. There were no more yells, but sounds of commotion, steps and voices, came from above, and on the second-floor landing we were impeded by people who popped out of doors. Miltan was a kangaroo; I couldn't have caught him for a purse. At the top of the second flight we were brought to a halt by obstructions. A colored man was wriggling, his arms held by the chinless wonder; Nat Driscoll, in his shirt but no trousers, was jumping up and down; the two Balkans, in fencing costumes, were backed against the wall; Zorka, in gold-leaf undies and that was all, was standing apart and systematically screaming. Before Miltan could make any progress or I could get around him, I felt myself brushed aside and Jeanne Miltan was there.

"What?" she demanded in a tone that would have stopped a hurricane. "Arthur! What is it?"

The colored man stopped wriggling and rolled his eyes at her and said something I didn't get, but apparently she did, for she started off on a lope down the hall. I was close behind her and there were steps behind me. She went to the last door, the end room. It was standing open and she passed through, taking the curve without slowing down. She jerked to a halt, saw it there on the floor, and walked over to it. I was beside her. It was Percy Ludlow, lying on his side, so tilted that he would have been on his back if he hadn't been propped up by the protruding point of the epee which was sticking clear through him.

JEANNE MILTAN said something foreign and then stood and stared down at it with her face frozen. I heard a gasp from Miltan behind me, and other noises, and turned and saw them ganged in the doorway.

"Keep out of here," I said. "All of you."

I stooped over for a quick look and straightened up and told Jeanne Miltan, "He's dead." She said peevishly, "Of course he is." A scream came from the doorway and I yelled in that direction, "Shut up!" and went on to Mrs. Miltan, "Somebody must stay here, and the police of course, and nobody must leave."

She nodded. "You phone the police. In the office. Nikola, you stay here. I'll go down to the hall—"

She was moving, but I stopped her. "I'd rather not. You do the phoning. It's your place and you saw it first. I'll take the street door. Don't let anyone in here, Miltan."

Jeanne Miltan was headed for the door and I followed her. They made way for us. Carla Lovchen was going to say something to me and I shook my head at her. The chinless wonder grabbed at my elbow and I dodged him. People had come up from the floor below and Nat Driscoll came running down the hall with his shirttails flying. At the head of the stairs I wheeled to announce: "Don't go into the end room, anybody. Ludlow's in there dead. Nobody is to leave the building." I saw Donald Barrett moving in my direction and the chinless wonder behind him. "If you two guys would herd everyone downstairs into the office it might simplify matters."

I disregarded the chatter that broke out and beat it down the steps, with Mrs. Miltan following me. On the ground floor she went to the rear, to the office, and I went to the front, to the door to the street vestibule. I was tempted to keep on going, right on through, and get to a phone and call up Nero Wolfe, but I decided it would be a bad move. If I once got out I might not get back in again, or, if I did, it would be under conditions not nearly so favorable as they were now. Guarding the portal, loyal and true, was the best bet.

From where I stood I could see the inmates straggling down the stairs. They were mostly silent and subdued, but a couple of the female dancing teachers were jabbering. Belinda Reade, the baby doll with a new silk dress, came along to me instead of turning toward the office and said in a determined voice that she had a very important appointment to keep. I told her I had one, too, so we were in the same boat. Donald Barrett, who was hovering in the background, approached.

"See here," he said, "I know I'm caught in this God-awful mess. Frightful stink and I'm helpless just because I'm here. But Miss Reade—after all—are you a cop?"

"No."

"Then my dear fellow, just turn your back and talk to me a moment—and she can just slip out and go to her appointment—"

"And before long a dozen dicks will slip out and trace her and haul her back. Don't be silly. Have you ever been intimate with a murder before? I guess you haven't. The worst thing you can do is make them start looking for you. They get upset. Take my advice and—just a minute, Miss Tormic."

THE TWO Balkans were there, three paces off. The glances that passed back and forth among the four of them, in one second, obviously meant something to them, but not to me. Belinda Reade said, "Come on, Don," and he followed her in the direction of the office. I surveyed the pair of girls. Carla had put a long, loose thing with buttons over her fencing costume. Neya had on the green robe, carelessly closed as before, with one hand inside its folds apparently clinging to it.

"There's no time to talk," I snappel. "You may be a couple of goons. I dont' know. But I'm asking you a damn straight question, and maybe your life depends on giving me a straight answer." I took Neya's eyes with mine. "You. Did you kill that man?"

"No."

"Say it again. You didn't?"

"No."

I switched to Carla. "Did you?"

"No. But I must tell you—"

"There's no time to tell me anything. That's the hell of it. But anyhow you can—there they are! Beat it! Quick, damn it!"

They scampered down the hall toward the office and were gone by the time the cops got through the vestibule. It was a pair of flatfeet. I opened the glass-paneled door and when they were in the hall let it close again.

"Hello, Precinct?"

"No, Radio patrol. Who ...e you?"

"Archie Goodwin, private detective from Nero Wolfe's office, happened to be here. I was sitting on the lid. I'll keep." I pointed. "Back in the office is Mrs. Miltan and others, and two flights up is a corpse."

"God, you're snappy. Sit on the lid a little longer, will you? Come on, Bill."

They tramped to the rear. I stood and played with my fingers. In about two minutes one of them tramped down the hall again and went upstairs. In another two minutes there were fresh arrivals in the vestibule, three dicks in plain clothes, but one glance was enough to tell they were precinct men, not homicide squad. I gave them a brief picture of it. One of them relieved me at the door, another went for the stairs, and the third went to the office and took me with him.

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH SUNNY, BILL?
HERE HE IS, NOW!
WELL, DOCTOR..?
UNLESS COMPLICATIONS DEVELOP, THE CHILD IS IN NO GRAVE DANGER, MRS. WORTH. THE FACT IS, I'M TREATING ABOUT 50 SIMILAR CASES IN THIS NEIGHBORHOOD!
AN EPIDEMIC OF SOME KIND?
YES--AN EPIDEMIC OF LAWLESSNESS, MRS. WORTH! MAY I SEE THE BOTTLE OF MILK THE LITTLE GIRL HAD BEEN DRINKING?
JUST AS I THOUGHT! HERE--TASTE THIS!

We Salute The Girl Scouts of America

...And the First Lady Joins us in Extending Congratulations on the occasion of their 28th ANNIVERSARY

"I am delighted to have this opportunity to send a message to the Girl Scouts on their 28th birthday.

"I feel that the program which is being carried out of practical home making, with first aid, child care and home nursing experience, will be of great value to the girls in their future lives. Their out-of-door activities will give them a power of enjoyment which they could not have in any other way. I hope they will realize this is an opportunity to develop into well rounded human beings."
